

BLI STUDENT PROJECT PROPOSAL

INTRODUCTION

BLI Student Project funding is intended to (1) stimulate learning about leadership through practice, (2) encourage and support student initiative, and (3) seed innovative projects that will contribute to the Institute, campus community, and/or society. This program provides BLI Fellows with grants up to $1,500 and other forms of support to launch projects that address issues about which they are passionate.

STUDENT ELIGIBILITY

All proposed projects must involve at least one BLI Fellow in a significant leadership role. The BLI Fellow involved has to have completed their leadership lab.

PAST EXAMPLES OF PROJECTS INCLUDE:

- An original theatrical production
- Tutoring and college prep mentoring at local, under-privileged high schools
- Development of a resource center for youth with an international non-profit organization
- Building water tanks in rural Brazil
- Providing iPads to cancer patients
- [Insert your project here!]

THE INSTITUTE'S EXPECTATIONS OF STUDENTS

- Leadership – Each project should include leadership as a key element. Leadership can be the focus and driving force of the initiative (e.g. inviting leaders of an industry to visit the University of Michigan) or the byproduct (e.g. building leadership skills as you implement the project). However you decide to integrate leadership, its presence must be clearly articulated in the proposal.
- Collaboration and Organization – Leadership happens in teams and groups. Your project proposal must include a description of how you will work with and through others to achieve your project and learning goals. We are particularly interested in your plans for organizing and coordinating the work of your team. You might also need to collaborate with other groups or organizations on and off campus.
- Team Learning Goals – We want to know what you as a team hope to learn from and gain (personally or professionally) from your work on the proposed project.
- Project Goals – The BLI prioritizes funding for projects that make a meaningful contribution to a community larger than the members of the project team. Describe your aspirations for the project as a whole and the broader impacts the project might have. NOTE – Ongoing long-term projects that have previously received BLI funding must provide proof of innovative elements being introduced into the project.
- Support Expectations – Sketch and justify the monetary and non-monetary support you hope to receive from the BLI. Also include any support you are receiving from other units on and off campus.

- Advisor Involvement – Faculty and staff are an integral part of the BLI community, and each project must include an advisor who is a UM faculty or staff member. It is important to address the role of the advisor in your project as well as your expectations for his/her involvement. Ways that an advisor may be involved in your project include but are not limited to: regular reflection meetings, strategic planning, active collaboration, and budget review. Make sure to discuss your ideas with your advisor prior to submitting your proposal, incorporating his/her input and feedback as a part of the application process. Your description of the advisor's role will play an important part in the committee's decision-making process.
- Reflection – In every experience, reflection is key to learning. As you prepare this proposal, keep in mind the element of reflection and how this will be integrated into your project implementation plan. What reflection methods will work best for the team? How will you share the results of your reflection with the BLI Team? Each other? The BLI community?
- Reporting – You will be expected to present your project and the lessons you've learned to the BLI community in some form. Examples include participating in the Institute's annual Fall Leadership Experience Showcase, writing an article for the Institute's website, or presenting to a group of BLI Fellows.
