AERO 201   U.S. Aviation History & Its Development into Air Power
Section 001

Credits:    1
Advisory Prerequisites: Permission of instructor.
Repeatability: May not be repeated for credit.
Cross-Listed Classes: UC 202 – US Aviat Hist-Dev II, Section 001
Primary Instructor: Liscombe, Jonathan R

Examines the development of aviation from the 18th century, from balloons and dirigibles, to the present, and how technology has affected growth and development of air power; traces use and development of air power through WW's I and II, the Korean and Vietnamese conflicts, employment in relief missions and civic action programs in the late 1960s, and employment in military actions concluding with Desert Shield/Desert Storm. Continuation of AERO 201.

American Culture

AMCULT 305    Asian Pacific American Community Service and Learning
Section 001

Credits:    3
Waitlist Capacity: unlimited class
Misc Info: AMCLUT 305 fulfills the Contemporary Communities and Social Issues area of specialty for the Minor in Asian/Pacific Islander American Studies, and Electives and Ethnic and/or Indigenous Studies Breadth requirements for the Concentration in American Culture.
Repeatability: May be elected twice for credit.
Primary Instructor: Lawsin, Emily P
This course examines strategies for building Asian/Pacific Islander American communities and developing leadership skills through community service learning and practice. Students will have the option to work with either a mentorship program or a local community project. Students will be responsible for regular attendance in a weekly seminar/meeting as well as participation at the designated community service site (in Detroit, Southfield, or Ann Arbor). Each student is expected to participate in a total of 30 hours of service over the entire semester (i.e., 3 hours per week for 10 weeks). Community service times will be determined on case-by-case basis. Assignments include readings, reflective journal assignments, an educational project, and final report.

Possible Service Sites: Students may volunteer with the Detroit Asian Youth (D.A.Y.) Project, Paaralang Pilipino Language and Cultural School, APIA Vote-Michigan, A/PIA Studies Program, UAAO GenAPA, Japanese American Citizens League Detroit Chapter, or APIA Heritage Month/MESA.

Students volunteering with D.A.Y. Project or Paaralang Pilipino will engage in projects that promote the social and political self-development of youth in the city. Incorporating a social justice curriculum and liberatory education theories through tutoring, poetry, arts, or media workshops, students will gain an in-depth perspective on the issues of racism, poverty, and education among Asian Americans, African Americans, and other diverse groups. The Detroit Asian Youth (D.A.Y.) Project was founded in 2004, and runs a mentorship program for mostly Hmong American students at Osborn High School and Bangladeshi students from Hamtramck, Detroit, and Warren. Paaralang Pilipino Language and Cultural School was founded 25 years ago, teaching all ages Philippine and Filipino American history and culture; they meet most Sundays at the Philippine American Community Center of Michigan in Southfield. (To develop a strong network of APA mentorship programs, mentors already volunteering with UM's Yuri Kochiyama Leadership Program, Project Lighthouse, or APA 101, are highly encouraged to enroll to receive course credit.)

Asian and Pacific Islander American Vote - Michigan is a non-partisan organization that serves the Asian Pacific Islander American community through civic participation, advocacy, and education. Students will help with planning and implementation of public education and outreach in the Asian American community; conduct voter registration drives at community events and houses of worship; and help with events across Southeast Michigan, usually on Saturdays or Sundays. Students volunteering with the Japanese American Citizens League Detroit Chapter will help develop an outreach and public education plan for the 50-year-old organization. Students volunteering with Asian Pacific Islander American Heritage Month will program a set of events, scheduled for March-April at UM, and co-sponsored by various groups on campus, APIA Studies, and the Office of Multi-Ethnic Student Affairs (MESA). Students volunteering with the Asian/Pacific Islander American Studies Program will help conduct surveys, do outreach, and program events, mostly on campus. Students doing programming with United Asian American Organizations (such as GenAPA Cultural Show) may also enroll for course credit.

Intended Audience: Students interested in AMCULT 305 are advised to have completed AMCULT 214, 314 or another Asian/Pacific Islander American Studies course (but is not required).

AMCULT 363

Asian/Pacific American Women

Section 001

Credits: 3

Repeatability: May not be repeated for credit.

Cross-Listed Classes: WOMENSTD 363 – Asian Pacif Amer Wmn, Section 001

Primary Instructor: Lawsin, Empily P

This interdisciplinary course focuses on the experiences of Asian American and Pacific Islander American women in the United States, including, but not limited to Chinese, Japanese, Filipina, Korean, Native Hawaiian, South Asian, and Southeast Asian women. Texts and films include an introduction to materials by and about Asian/Pacific Islander American (APIA) women, from historical, anthropological, sociological, psychological, musical, and literary perspectives, thereby allowing students to compare and contrast the experiences of different ethnicities and generations. Discussions and assignments will examine the intersections of gender, race, ethnicity, class, sexuality, and nationality in APIA women’s lives. Learning critical theories about feminism, womanism, immigration, domestic violence, and globalization will show how APIA women have become agents of social change, publicly and privately, at home and in their communities.

AMCULT/WOMENSTD 363 meets:
- Contemporary Communities and Social Issues area of specialty for the Minor in Asian/Pacific Islander American Studies;
- Transnationalism, Diaspora, and/or Empire; Women, Gender and/or Sexuality; and Ethnic and/or Indigenous Studies Breadth Requirements for the Concentration in American Culture.
- Gender, Race and Ethnicity in the U.S; Gender, Culture, and Representation; and Gender in a Global Context thematic areas for the Women's Studies Concentration, and
- Electives for the Gender, Race, and Ethnicity Minor.

Course Requirements: Assignments include: journals, two exams, and term project. For the term project, students will write a research essay OR produce a creative project on an APIA woman.

AMCULT 614    Asian American History
Section 001
Credits:     3
Waitlist Capacity:   unlimited
Advisory Prerequisites:   Graduate standing and permission of instructor.
Repeatability:    May not be repeated for credit.
Cross Listed Classes:  History 614 – Asian American History
Primary Instructor:  Kuroshige, Scott

Through extensive readings in Asian American history, this course surveys scholarship and theoretical debates dating from the origins of ethnic studies in the 1960s to the present. We will examine the histories of diverse groups — including Chinese, Korean, South Asian, Southeast Asian, Filipino, and Japanese Americans — as well as the history of Asian Americans as a panethnic, coalitional identity. Our discussions of historiography and epistemology will begin with the following questions:
- How does the study of Asian Americans challenges historians to rethink issues of race, class, nation, gender, and sexuality?
- Why and how did the original vision of Asian American Studies emphasize social history and community studies?
- What have Asian American historians learned from interdisciplinary approaches?
- How have literary theory and cultural studies influenced recent and current work?
- How is globalization reshaping the way with think of Asian America?
- Why is Asian American Studies pivotal to developing a transnational awareness of history, culture, and politics.
- What is the future direction of the field?

ANTHRRCUL 356    Topics in Sociocultural Anthropology
Section 001
Japanese Language, Gender and Sexuality
Credits:     3
Other:     Theme
Advisory Prerequisites:  ANTHRRCUL 101.
Repeatability:    May be repeated for a maximum of 6 credit(s).
Primary Instructor:  Abe, Hideko
This course examines how Japanese language has played an important role in the development of language and gender studies, both theoretically and empirically. It historicizes and contextualizes the development of ‘Japanese women’s language,’ a much-studied and misunderstood topic, as part of wider Japanese gender ideology. Among the topics covered are:

- cultural ideologies in Japanese language and gender studies;
- the role of language in the social construction of gender and sexual identities;
- gendered norms for language use; and
- sexual orientation and linguistic expression.

This course challenges students to ask questions about the way gender and sexuality are expressed in Japanese language:

- What is ‘women’s language’?
- How has the notion of women’s language been developed?
- How does language shape our experience and understanding of gender and gender difference?
- How are sexuality and sexual desire expressed in language?
- How do queer speakers negotiate their sexual identities through linguistic practices?
- How do children learn and resist gendered language?
- What are the cultural definitions of “masculinity” and “femininity” and their relationship to language use in Japanese context?

All readings are in English.

ANTHRCUL 402   Chinese Society and Cultures
Section 001

Credits: 3
Waitlist Capacity: unlimited
Advisory Prerequisites: Junior standing.
Repeatability: May not be repeated for credit.
Primary Instructor: Muegller, Erik A

Description and interpretation of the agrarian aspect of Chinese civilization, treating such topics as traditional family and village organization, class structure, and modern changes.

ANTHRCUL 502   Humanistic Studies of Historical and Contemporary China
Section 001

Credits: 3
Consent: With permission of instructor.
Advisory Prerequisites: Permission of instructor.
Repeatability: May not be repeated for credit.
Cross Listed Classes:
- Asian 502 – China Humanistic St, Section 001
- CCS 502 – China Humanistic St, Section 001
- Histart 504 – China Humanistic St, Section 001
- History 548 – China Humanistic St, Section 001
- Polisci 502 – China Humanistic St, Section 001
Primary Instructor: Rolston, David Lee

This course will examine the present state of research in selected areas of scholarly inquiry in Chinese studies – language, literature, history, religion material culture, and art history – as we interrogate such seemingly commonsense notions as "civilization," "culture," "tradition," "modernity," and above all, "Chineseness." Our goals are to develop good treading skills, stimulate critical thinking, and inspire imaginative approaches to humanistic problems.
ANTHRCUL 632
Comparative Analysis of Kinship

- Credits: 3
- Waitlist Capacity: unlimited
- Advisory Prerequisites: Graduate standing and permission of instructor.
- Repeatability: May not be repeated for credit.
- Primary Instructor: Feeley-Harnik, Gillian
- Instructor: Trautmann, Thomas R

This course will examine current theoretical and methodological issues in the analysis of kinship and religion, using case studies from Africa, Asia, Southeast Asia, Melanesia, Europe, and North America. In the words of anthropologist Robert McKinley: "Kinship itself is a moral philosophy. It answers the question of how it is possible for one human being to be morally bound to another. The strength of a kinship system is based on its ability to draw people into this framework of mutual trust." Yet kin relations may also be fraught with violence, ranging from sacrifice to murder; some would argue that kinship and racism are simply different dimensions of the same phenomenon. This course will focus on the social processes through which people define, create, extend, limit, sever or transform their relatedness with others within and over generations. We will explore how people conceptualize who is, or is not, their own "kin" or "kind" and why; the moral imagination involved in working through the contradictory loyalties characterizing even the most intimate, small-scale relations; where, how and why people draw the lines between themselves and other forms of organic life; how generative relations are expressed in forms ranging from substances like blood, milk, or semen, to new reproductive technologies and genetic genealogies; and the significance of places in creating, shaping, containing, transforming relations over time.

ASIAN 200
Introduction to Japanese Civilization

- Credits: 4
- Requirements & Distribution: HU
- Advisory Prerequisites: A knowledge of Japanese is not required.
- Repeatability: May not be repeated for credit.
- Cross Listed Classes: HISTORY 203 – Intr Jpn Civilzatn, Section 001
- Primary Instructor: Auerback, Micah Louis

This course is designed as an introduction to aspects of the history and culture of Japan. We will examine translations of primary documents, selected critical essays and visual materials (including film) both to engage with representations of moments of Japan's history, but also to raise a series of questions regarding the methods of cultural analysis. Thus, the aim of this course is two-fold:
- to analyze selected aspects of the cultural history of "Japan," and
- to critically reflect on the act of analysis itself.

Instructor: de Pee, Christian

This course offers an introduction to the profound cultural transformations that occurred in China during the eleventh century, a period when China had the largest cities in the world, with bustling night markets, antique shops, restaurants, and theaters. The simultaneous, interrelated developments in economy, technology, philosophy, religion, literature, and painting during this period bear a close resemblance to those of the Italian Renaissance, yet the achievements of the Song dynasty (960-1279) are much less well known than those of Florence, Venice, and Rome. The course provides an overview both of the history of this period and of the study of this period by European and American historians, thereby affording an introduction to the history of the Song dynasty as well as a modest introduction to the study of history as a discipline.

The course requires purchase of a writing guide (less than $10). All other readings will be posted on CTools.

Course Requirements: The final grade will be based on class participation, a short analysis paper, a book review, and a final examination.

Intended Audience: Prior familiarity with Chinese history is not required.

ASIAN 248 Jesus Comes to Asia: Conversion and its Consequences in Asia
Section 001
Credits: 3
Requirements & Distribution: HU
Waitlist Capacity: 99
Repeatability: May not be repeated for credit.
Cross-Listed Classes: History 248 – Jesus Comes to Asia, Section 001
Religion 248 – Jesus Comes to Asia, Section 001
Primary Instructor: de la Cruz, Deirdre Leong

This course provides a broad introduction to the study of Christian conversion and its legacy in the regions now known as South, East, and Southeast Asia. Its focus is largely limited to the historical period during which Christian conversion was contemporaneous with other forms of global expansion such as colonialism. Drawing from a range of primary and secondary source materials, we examine who Christian missionaries were and the many motivations that drove them, the diversity of methods used to convert native populations, and, of tantamount importance, the ways in which local populations resisted and transformed Christianity to suit or blend with their own social and political structures, spiritual beliefs and practices, and notions of temporal and divine power.

Course Requirements: Four 600-word response papers. Multiple choice and short answers midterm (20%): Final take-home exam (30%). Choose three out of five provided questions about themes, processes, and controversies in the novel Silence, each answer 3-4 pages and a Works Cited page. Attendance and participation (10%): 3 or more unexcused absences automatically result in the loss of the entire participation grade.

Intended Audience: This course will appeal to a wide-range of undergraduate students, especially those interested in a concentration or minor in Asian Studies or History (it will satisfy a portion of the ALC "breadth" requirements). It also appeals to students interested in cross-cultural & interdisciplinary studies.

Class Format: Class meets twice a week primarily as lectures with some discussion and question/answer periods. Students read secondary texts for the theoretical framework of week’s topic and then read primary source materials to give them a closer look at the details and mindsets of the people we are studying.

ASIAN 252 Undergraduate Seminar in Japanese Culture
Section 001
Credits: 3

Center for Japanese Studies 7 East Asia Course Descriptions Winter 2012
This course will focus on the various phases of Japan's encounter with the West from the 16th-century introduction of Christianity to the mid-19th century opening to Western trade and institutions, and the American occupation after WWII. We will examine the shifting representations of the West in the Japanese imagination, for example, as object of aspiration and identification, as "barbarian" enemy and rival, protective father-figure, space of erotic fantasy, and so on. In sum, what roles has "the West" played as the Other in the ongoing project of Japanese self-definition, and why?

Readings will include both contemporary fiction and cultural studies materials.

Requirements: discussions, four two-page essays, and a final paper.

ASIAN 254    Undergraduate Seminar in Korean Culture
Section 001

Credits: 3
Requirements & Distribution: HU

Advisory Prerequisites: No knowledge of Korean language is required. Repeatability: May be repeated for a maximum of 6 credit(s).
Primary Instructor: Ryu, Youngju

In the second half of the twentieth century, South Korea underwent an economic development that transformed the country from one of the poorest nations in the world to one of the world’s dozen largest economies, and in the last decade, popular culture has emerged as the most prominent and dynamic of all South Korean exports. Institutional and ideological aspects of this developmental miracle are well-known, but how do we begin to understand what such a change — pursued with a speed and thoroughness rarely witnessed in world history — must have meant for the people living through it? In this class, we will examine values, desires, and structures that sustain people’s lives in times of great upheaval and uprooting, through the medium of popular culture. In particular, we will focus on how popular cultural forms construct, represent, or contest dominant ideas about Korean history, national identity, gender roles, and globalization.

ASIAN 261    Introduction to Modern Chinese Culture
Section 001

Credits: 4
Requirements & Distribution: HU
Advisory Prerequisites: No knowledge of Chinese required.
Other Course Info: Taught in English.
Repeatability: May not be repeated for credit.
Primary Instructor: Kaldis, Nicholas

This course is intended to introduce students to major developments in Chinese cultural history from the modern era, focusing on films and short stories. In this connection, we will survey and explore a number of major developments in the evolution of modern Chinese culture. These include:

- the diverse artistic expressions of a modern Chinese identity in the early decades of the 20th century, when intellectuals reacted against the entire Chinese cultural tradition;
The Mao-dominated decades (1942-1976), when all cultural production was forced to serve political goals; the reaction against Mao-era film and fiction that began in the late 1970s.

We will finish this survey by looking at some films and stories from the new millennium. As we survey film and fiction from the past 100 years, we will witness the ways that 20th-century Chinese notions of identity (as represented in film and fiction) have oscillated between highly subjective, personal, experimental, and creative models on the one hand, and politically-dictated forms that serve narrow social and political agendas on the other. Students will simultaneously learn about the subjects and styles Chinese authors and filmmakers have borrowed, invented, explored, been burdened with, and rebelled against for almost a century as they negotiate between individually creative and politically prescribed expressions of Chinese identity.

Course Requirements: EVALUATION & GRADING:
- Participation (20%)
- Reaction Papers (20%)
- Quizzes (20%)
- Exam I (20%)
- Exam II (20%)

The Arts and Letters of China
Section 001

Credits: 4
Requirements & Distribution: HU
Other: WorldLit
Repeatability: May not be repeated for credit.
Cross-Listed Classes:
- HISTART 265 – Arts & Letters of China, Section 001
- PHIL 265 - Arts & Letters of China, Section 001
- RCHUMS 265 - Arts & Letters of China, Section 001

This interdisciplinary and multimedia course is taught jointly by faculty specialists in Chinese philosophy, religion, cultural history, history of art, drama, literature, and visual culture. It is not a survey course. Instead, the main task will be the sustained and critical study of a number of significant and representative works in order to present some major themes and art forms of the distinct and complex civilizations of China. In spite of inner tensions, this is a cultural tradition that can be seen as a highly integrated system composed of mutually reinforcing parts, making such an interdisciplinary and multimedia approach particularly effective. Toward the end of the term we will observe the system's collapse as it struggles to adapt to the modern world, and consider how our themes continue, persist, or change. We will conclude our course with discussions of art, poetry, and cinema from contemporary China. Background lectures on language and early culture will be followed by topics and readings that include: “Confucianism” (Confucius and Mencius); “Daoism” (Laozi and Zhuangzi); the art of argumentation; themes in Chinese religiosity; Chan (Zen) Buddhism; lyricism and visual experience in poetry and painting; music; traditional short fiction; literati and popular theater; modern fiction and culture; and film.

Course Requirements: occasional brief responses to readings, three short papers, and a final exam.

Intended Audience: There are no prerequisites for this course.

Class Format: The format of the course consists of three hours of lectures and one hour of discussion. The lectures will be given by:
- Baxter (language)
- Brown (early culture)
- Lam (music)
- Lin (“Daoism,” poetry, and garden)
- Tang (modern culture and literature)
- Nornes (film)
• Powers (painting)
• Brose (religion)
• Rolston (theater and traditional fiction)

Introduction to the Study of Korean Religions
Section 001

Credits: 3
Requirements & Distribution: HU
Waitlist Capacity: 99
Repeatability: May not be repeated for credit.
Cross-Listed Classes: RELIGION 272 – Intro Kor Religions, Section 001
Primary Instructor: Ahn, Juhn Young

This course will serve as a broad survey of the major themes and developments in the history of religion in Korea. It begins with traces of religious life from the Neolithic period and ends with the rise of new religious movements in contemporary Korea. Rather than focus on dates, names, and facts, this course will pay closer attention to the ways in which we use such categories of analysis as magic, ritual, syncretism, gender, family, class, economy, colonialism, globalization, and the state to study Korean religions. Students will be asked to explore these and other topics by applying context-sensitive reading and critical analysis of the material. There are no prerequisites, but some background in the history and culture of Korea would be helpful. Readings will include both primary material in translation and secondary scholarship.

Course Requirements: 2 quizzes (map quiz, multiple choice, fill in the blanks), 2 response papers (1200-1500 words each (30%), reading journal (10%), participation (10%), and final exam (20%), like the quizzes but longer.

Intended Audience: Undergrads in all fields and especially those who intend to continue to take courses in Korean Studies or Asian Studies

Class Format: 3 hours per week consisting of two lectures and short in-class discussion

Rewriting Identities in Modern Japan
Section 001

Credits: 3
Requirements & Distribution: HU, WorldLit
Waitlist Capacity: 99
Advisory Prerequisites: Knowledge of Japanese is not required.
Primary Instructor: Zwicker, Jonathan

This course is an introduction to the major authors and works of Japan’s modern period. We will examine fiction in its historical contexts from the mid-nineteenth century through the early twentieth century to explore how Japanese writers and intellectuals engaged with the changing world of the last century and a half. Themes will include: modernism and modernity, nostalgia and homesickness, empire and its aftermath, and the cultures of globalization. Authors will include: Higuchi Ichiyo, Natsume Soseki, Akutagawa Ryunosuke, Tanizaki Jun’ichiro, Kawabata Yasunari, Hayashi Fumiko, and Mishima Yukio.

Photography in Japan
Section 001

Credits: 3
Requirements & Distribution: HU

Center for Japanese Studies

East Asia Course Descriptions
Winter 2012
This course explores the history of photography in Japan from the mid nineteenth-century to the present. We examine issues that faced Japanese photographers by focusing on four interconnected themes: self-representation, places/sites, text/image, and gender. The course is divided into three chronological periods: 1850-1910; 1910-1945; and 1945 to the present. It will familiarize students with different uses and methods for producing photographic images. In addition, students will learn of historic conceptions of the potentials and limitations in the photographic medium. Each meeting will start with a lecture that provides historical context and biographical information on photographers, followed by a discussion of specific images and photographers. In the process, students will learn about the technical history of photography, acquire the conceptual tools to interpret photographic images, and become familiar with a few dozen of the most significant photographers and photographic works from Japan.

This course introduces students to the history of photographic technology and the key cultural significance of photography in modern Japanese history. It does so by exposing students to the history of analogue photography that lays the foundations for grasping the aesthetic, socio-cultural, and conventional uses of its digital counterpart. Aside from learning about the specifics of the Japanese case, students will become familiar with broader discourses such as reproducibility, identity, and framing. They will learn how photographers articulate the politics of representing gender, authority, and the self. By working with 35mm films, they acquire hands-on understanding of technology and acquire fluency in manipulating digitally photographic images. Through such methods, students will arrive at a general understanding of the ways in which photographic representations work in a multitude of contexts: advertisement, propaganda, newspapers, medicine, family and personal history, and artistic expression. In the process, they will also learn how to critically analyze photographic representations that they once accepted without questioning, as well as acquire the vocabulary to explain how such images shape their perceptions of reality.

Course Requirements: Students are required to submit two sets of self-portraits, two short analytical papers (3-5 pages), and one final research paper (8-10 pages). Attendance and participation in group discussion will be considered in determining the final grade.

Intended Audience: Undergraduate concentrators in Asian Studies (Japan Studies in particular), and non-concentrators with general interest in the history of technology, media, and pictorial representations.

Class Format: The class consists of lectures given twice a week. Throughout the course students will visit art collections on campus such as Asia Library, Clements Library, and possibly UMMA. A local darkroom may be available in the future.

This course will compare medicine in ancient China, particularly acupuncture, with medicine found in ancient Greece and Rome. We will look at figures, such as Chinese physician Chunyu Yi, as well as Greek and Roman physicians, such as Hippocrates and Galen.

Our main themes will include:

- How was medicine defined in the ancient world?
- To what extent was its practice similar or different from modern professional forms?
- Was medicine a craft or a science?
- Did ancient physician dissect?
- What relationship existed between medicine and religion or magic?
• How do we explain differences between the Western and Chinese medical traditions?
All reading assignments will be posted on CTools, and so there are no texts that need to be purchased.

Course Requirements:
Assignments:
• Two group presentations (10 minutes) on the reading assignments, preferably in PPT [20% of your grade]
• Page responses each week on the reading questions [10% of your grade]
• Two 7-10 page papers [60% of your grade]
Active participation and attendance [10% of your grade]

Intended Audience: No prior knowledge of Chinese or classical languages are required. All are welcome.

ASIAN 366     Controversies in Contemporary China
Section 001
Credits:     3
Requirements & Distribution:  ID
Waitlist Capacity:   99
Advisory Prerequisites:   ASIAN 260 or ASIAN 261.
Repeatability: May not be repeated for credit.
Primary Instructor:  Brown, Miranda D

This course explores four contemporary controversies in the People’s Republic of China in order to provide a broad understanding of the very recent history of the world’s most populous nation:
• current memories of World War II, particularly wartime atrocities, resistance, and collaboration;
• official and non-official narratives of atrocities committed by the state and its actors after 1949, such as the Great Leap Forward and Cultural Revolution;
• the costs and benefits of economic liberalization since 1978; and
• debates over human rights.

The course incorporates a wide range of source material, including primary sources in translation, scholarly essays in the fields of history and cultural studies, and documentaries. Through examining such materials, students will acquire the skills to deliver nuanced and analytic examinations of issues affected by state censorship, media, and Cold War politics. Aside from stressing critical thinking, the class also helps students hone their skills in writing expository essays.

Course Requirements:
• Three short essays to be submitted through CTools (60% of the total grade);
• One presentations with one-page write-up (PPT; no more than 10 minutes for the whole group presentation) (10% of total grade);
• One final group project (20% of the total grade);
• Each group presentation will be no more than 15 minutes long. The write-up (2-page maximum) is due during the final exam (via CTools);
• Classroom attendance and active participation (10%). (Note: more than 5 unexcused absences will result in automatic failure from the course).

Intended Audience: This course is intended for undergraduates in all fields. All readings are in English; no background knowledge of the language or history is required.

ASIAN 367     Languages of Asia
Section 001
Credits:     3
Requirements & Distribution:  HU
This course examines selected languages of Asia and what they can tell us about the societies that have used them: how they work, how they are distributed geographically and socially, how they are connected to each other, how (and whether) they have been written, what their status has been, and how all these things have changed in response to historical processes. We will focus primarily on East, South, and Southeast Asia. The course is organized into four main parts:

- Preliminaries (basic geography and history, basic linguistic concepts)
- Asian language families
- Writing systems
- Language in culture and politics

Course Requirements: Course requirements include regular reading assignments, homework exercises, occasional quizzes (not always announced in advance), class presentations, two 6-8 page papers, and active participation in class.

Intended Audience: There are no prerequisites; no previous knowledge of Asian languages is assumed and all required readings will be in English.

Class Format: 3 hours per week in lecture format

ASIAN 369 Chinese Film

Section 001

Credits: 3
Requirements & Distribution: HU
Waitlist Capacity: 99
Repeatability: May not be repeated for credit.
Primary Instructor: Kaldis, Nicholas

This course provides an introduction to Chinese film of the past several decades, including film from the People's Republic of China (PRC), Hong Kong (HK), and Taiwan (ROC). The films selected for this course are the most important course materials. Class time will be spent viewing these films, learning about the directors and the reception of these films, learning about how films are produced, and learning how to analyze and interpret films. Emphasis will be placed on developing skills in watching & analyzing film and learning how to discuss, debate, and write critically about films.

Course Requirements:
- Group Presentations (2 Total)...20 Points
- Group Response papers (8 Total)...20 Points
- Quizzes...20 Points
- Exam I...20 Points
- Exam II...20 Points

Intended Audience: Undergraduates in Asian Studies, History, and Screen Arts

Class Format: Class will meet twice a week for 90 minutes. In addition, students are required to attend a lab section for the viewing of the films.
ASIAN 371     Natural Disasters in East Asia
Section 001

Credits: 3
Requirements & Distribution: SS
Waitlist Capacity: 99
Repeatability: May not be repeated for credit.

This course will examine natural disasters in the context of East Asian history, with the goal of teaching students the tools used by social scientists. Students will be asked to: (a) analyze historical and ethnographic data on natural disasters in East Asia; and (b) assess the influence of class, ethnicity, education, and power on the making and outcome of these natural disasters. The course ultimately hopes to encourage students to think of "natural" disasters as "social" phenomena that demand better social responses.

In recent years the world has witnessed an unprecedented level of destruction caused by a series of devastating natural disasters. They have leveled entire cities, taken the lives of hundreds of thousands of people, and displaced even more. These events have stoked the popular imagination with dramatic images, the global media has come to depict hurricane Katrina, the 2004 Indian Ocean tsunami, the 2005 Kashmir earthquake, the 2008 Wenchuan earthquake, the 2010 Haiti earthquake, and most recently the tsunami that hit northeastern Japan as the work of an unpredictable, uncontrollable, and essentially chaotic force. Although true in some respects, this way of understanding earthquakes, tsunamis, and other events tends to obscure the social, political, and historical side of these so-called “natural” disasters. When, in fact, did we begin to regard these events as the work of “nature” as opposed to, say, God or some other supernatural agency? On what basis do we classify a certain event as a “natural” disaster? Can we ignore the influence of class, ethnicity, education, and power on the making and outcome of these disasters? This course will bring these and other questions to bear on the historical and comparative study of natural disasters in East Asia.

Course Requirements: Readings include both primary material in translation and secondary scholarship. 1 quiz (map quiz, multiple choice, fill in the blanks), 3 response papers (2,000-2,500 words each), 1 peer-review paper (1,300-1,500 words), 1 reading journal, 1 in-class presentation, and participation.

Intended Audience: All undergraduates, especially those who want to take more courses in Asian Studies. There are no prerequisites for this course, but some background in the history and culture of East Asia is recommended.

Class Format: This course will meet twice a week. Each week will consist of two lectures and short in-class discussion.

ASIAN 374     Korean War in Transnational Literature
Section 001

Credits: 3
Requirements & Distribution: HU
Waitlist Capacity: 99
Repeatability: May not be repeated for credit.
Primary Instructor: Ryu, Youngju

The importance of the Korean War continues in shaping both East Asia as we know it today and American foreign policy and culture in the latter half of the twentieth century can hardly be denied. Yet, the Korean War continues to be referred to as "the forgotten war" or "the unknown war," and remains the subject of much mystification more than half a century after the ceasefire. This course will focus on representations of the war in transnational literature as a way of moving beyond nationalist historiography and international relations paradigms that have dominated existing studies. Texts to be examined include fiction, poetry, and memoirs written by Koreans, Japanese, resident Koreans in Japan, African and Asian Americans, as well as veterans of the war in China and the U.S. Through these diverse texts, the course will explore the complex and far-reaching impact of the war not only on the two Koreas, but around the globe from China to South Africa. After developing a nuanced understanding of the forces that culminated in the war and in turn were unleashed by it, the discussion will shift to more theoretical topics including the relationship between violence and writing, war and racism, memory and mourning, official and unofficial narratives, gender and trauma, and truth and reconciliation. In addition to literary texts, readings will include archival material such as government documents, secondary articles on the history of the war, and analyses of cultural artifacts produced by the Cold War. We will also view one documentary and one feature film as intertexts. The larger aim of the course is to trace historical and aesthetic connections that situate the Korean War within spatiotemporal trajectories that extend far beyond the boundaries of the nation and the immediate war years.

Course Requirements: Students will submit two papers. The first, 5-6 pages in length, will consist of a close reading of a single text or a single motif. The second, 9-10 pages in length, will examine one of the larger theoretical issues posed in the class by incorporating two to three texts. Eight quizzes will be given throughout the term to test students' familiarity with the reading assignments for the week. These quizzes are designed to help students keep abreast of the readings. In addition, students will be responsible for one in-class group presentation on some aspect of Korean War historiography. Attendance and active participation are mandatory and together count for 15% of the grade.

Intended Audience: Primarily 3rd or 4th year undergraduates with good writing and analytical skills. In addition, students interested in East Asian literature, comparative literature, or contemporary American literature from a transnational and cultural studies perspective.

Class Format: Class will meet twice a week. Except when students make presentations, each will be a lecture. Active participation from the students will be elicited and incorporated into the lecture. Depending on the nature of each class, 20-30 minutes of the class can be set aside for discussion.

Research: Critical Concepts for the Study of Asia

| Credits: | 3 |
| Waitlist Capacity: | 99 |
| Enforced Prerequisites: | At least one course in Asian Studies (ASIAN) with a minimum grade of C-.
| Advisory Prerequisites: | Junior or senior standing and concentration in Asian Studies. |
| Other Course Info: | W. |
| Repeatability: | May not be repeated for credit. |
| Primary Instructor: | Fukuoka, Maki |

This course introduces students to a variety of cultural texts (literature, art, and film) from East, South, and Southeast Asia and looks at the ways in which these forms have traveled within Asia and beyond. While not an exhaustive survey, students will be introduced to the diversity of cultures in Asia through close readings of important classical and modern texts and by considering a range of art objects, maps, and artifacts drawn from the University's own collections. We will emphasize self-reflexive, critical thinking skills through the consideration of texts and objects through critical frameworks and through the lens of critical concepts. We will ask: How can we approach Asia as an object of inquiry that goes beyond the sort of simple us/them dichotomies that often leave us feeling alienated and divided against one another? Is it possible to make other cultures objects of study while at the same time not objectifying them? How and where do we draw boundary lines when we map these various cultures? All readings will be in English.

Course Requirements: Students' progress will be evaluated through five writing assignments.

What is Literature? A Critical History of Reading and Writing in East Asia?

| Credits: | 3 |
| Waitlist Capacity: | 99 |
This course offers an opportunity to explore the history of reading and writing in East Asia — principally Japan and China — with a view to determining their distinctive nature and function from a comparative Asian as well as East/West perspective. We will begin by analyzing scenes of reading and writing from literature, history, and philosophy, and proceed to interpret them through Chinese and Japanese critical theory and commentaries. Questions include, but are not limited to:

- a comparative analysis of speech and writing, including calligraphy as a material aesthetic or ritual object and medium of communication;
- controversies around the status of literature, particularly narratives, as truth or fabrication;
- the history and politics of canon formation;
- the culture of reading/writing milieus and their links to class and identity formation;
- the use of language in philosophical systems claiming their inadequacy.

Students are encouraged to bring their own questions for discussion in the seminar. Texts will be in English translation, with original-language sources available as appropriate.

Course Requirements: Coursework includes shorter response essays, an oral presentation, and a term paper.

Korean Cinema and Media

| Credits: | 3 |
| Waitlist Capacity: | 99 |
| Repeatability: | May be elected four times for credit. May be elected more than once in the same term. |
| Meet-Together Classes: | SAC 441 – National Cinemas, Section 001 |
| Primary Instructor: | Lee, Sangjoon |

This undergraduate course will explore the history of Korean cinema through the framework of national/transnational cinema discourse, auteur/genre theory, globalization, the division system, and the problem of nation/state which evokes the question of identity.

In this chronologically structured course, each student will learn the cinema of Korea through a set of key films, directors, and dominant genres by lectures, screenings, and intensive and engaging discussions throughout the semester. Such critically and historically important films as Madame Freedom, The Housemaid, JSA, Taegukki, My Sassy Girl, Oldboy, The Host, and Haeundae will be screened.

Through readings, discussions, in-class screenings, and presentations, our goal is to develop a broad understanding of Korean cinema and popular cultures exploring their wide-ranging impact and asking how they participate in the transnational production and circulation of culture, ideology, modernity, politics, and tradition in both regional and international contexts.

Intended Audience: It is not necessary for student to have prior knowledge of Korean cinema, and all are welcome.

Japanese Buddhism

| Credits: | 3 |
| Other: | WorldLit |
| Waitlist Capacity: | 99 |
| Advisory Prerequisites: | ASIAN 230 or permission of instructor. |
| Repeatability: | May not be repeated for credit. |

Intended Audience: It is not necessary for student to have prior knowledge of Japanese Buddhism, and all are welcome.
Primary Instructor: Auerback, Micah Louis

Buddhism forms the backbone of pre-modern Japanese civilization. Even today, it remains a vital cultural reference point; just as knowledge of the Judeo-Christian tradition is still essential for understanding Europe, so is knowledge of the Buddhism still indispensable for understanding Japan. This course surveys key thinkers, texts, doctrines, practices, and objects from Japan’s fifteen-hundred-plus year engagement with Buddhism. It draws on a variety of sources in English translation, including myths, sermons, personal letters, polemical tracts, spiritual autobiography, and religious testimonials. In addition, it also makes use of anthropological accounts, historical studies, audio recordings, still images, and films, both documentary and fictional.

Intended Audience: No prerequisites. Previous background knowledge of or experience with Buddhism, Japanese history, and the Japanese language or culture is useful but not required.

History 548 – China Humanistic St, Section 001
Polisci 502 – China Humanistic St, Section 001

Primary instructor: Rolston, David Lee

This course will examine the present state of research in selected areas of scholarly inquiry in Chinese studies – language, literature, history, religion material culture, and art history – as we interrogate such seemingly commonsense notions as "civilization," "culture," "tradition," "modernity," and above all, "Chineseness." Our goals are to develop good treading skills, stimulate critical thinking, and inspire imaginative approaches to humanistic problems.

ASIANLAN 102
First Year Chinese II
Section 001

Credits: 5
Credit Exclusions: No credit granted to those who have completed or are enrolled in ASIANLAN 103.

Enforced Prerequisites: ASIANLAN 101.
Repeatability: May not be repeated for credit.
Primary Instructor: Li, Jinyi

ASIANLAN 102 is a continuation course of ASIANLAN 101. In this course, the four skills of listening, speaking, reading and writing are emphasized. About 320 characters will be introduced in this course. It is our goal that at the end of the term students should be able to carry on simple conversations with each other. Daily attendance is required.

Textbooks: Integrated Chinese (Level One, Part II); Textbook, Workbook, Character Workbook (all in Simplified Character Edition)
Intended Audience: No auditing/visitors allowed. This is not the right course for students who already speak Chinese (Mandarin). These students should try ASIANLAN 204, Reading and Writing Chinese II, or ASIANLAN 104, Reading and Writing Chinese I, offered in the Fall term.

Class Format: The class meets five hours a week: two hours of lecture and three hours of recitation. In the lectures, Chinese characters and grammar will be introduced; in the recitation classes, patterns and conversational skills will be developed.

ASIANLAN 126
First Year Japanese II
Section 001
Credits: 5
Credit Exclusions: No credit granted to those who have completed or are enrolled in ASIANLAN 127 or 129 or RCLANG 196.
Enforced Prerequisites: ASIANLAN 124 or 125. Repeatability: May not be repeated for credit.
Primary Instructor: Endo, Kenji

In this course, students continue to develop the basic language skills (speaking, listening, reading and writing) while becoming familiar with the aspects of Japanese culture which directly contribute to language competence. Drill sessions are conducted in Japanese and emphasize the ability to produce and comprehend Japanese at a natural speed. Analyses and explanations delivered in English and Japanese are reserved for the lecture sessions. The end-of-year project is an individual, pair or group presentation in Japanese for a wider audience. The best performances of the course will be voted on by fellow students.

ASIANLAN 128
Mastering the Basics of Kanji: Learning Strategies and Orthography
Section 001
Credits: 1
Other: Theme
Waitlist Capacity: 99
Enforced Prerequisites: ASIANLAN 125 or above with a minimum grade of C
Repeatability: May not be repeated for credit.
Primary Instructor: Tsuda, Satoko Perry

This course is designed for students who want to learn more about kanji (Chinese characters). It offers two main methods: kanji learning strategies and Japanese calligraphy. Together they facilitate students’ acquisition of kanji and thus supplement kanji learning in students' regular Japanese courses. This course focuses in the following aspects of kanji learning:

- understanding basic structures and components of kanji;
- mastering proper balance and stroke order to write kanji;
- developing the ability to pay close attention to details of kanji including “stop,” “(hook),” and “release;”
- developing the ability to recognize pronunciations and meanings of kanji based on their radicals (the ideographic and phonetic building blocks of kanji); and
- developing students’ own strategies to memorize familiar and unfamiliar kanji efficiently and effectively.

Content includes:

- Japanese orthography (the variations of the Japanese characters and their origins),
- categories of kanji (basic kanji shapes, formation, and components),
- radicals of kanji (shapes, meanings, readings),
- how to write kanji (basic rules and stroke orders), and
- homonyms in Japanese kanji (strategies to distinguish homonyms).

Course Requirements:
Project work
Two projects will be assigned to the students to demonstrate their work in the course:
Project 1 — Submission of two calligraphy works (an assigned kanji and a kanji of the student’s choosing)
Project 2 — Presentation of the student’s original mnemonics

Classroom participation and performance
Homework assignments (includes kanji practice sheets)
Portfolio
The students will be asked to compile a portfolio with their calligraphy works and kanji practice sheets in order for them to review and track their progress throughout the course.

Intended Audience: Any students currently taking or who have taken Japanese can register for. The course, however, is designed for students who have experienced difficulties learning kanji. It’s meant to be a supplement for students who are facing difficulties with their regular JLP courses due struggles with kanji.

Class Format: The class will meet once a week for two hours. The two-hour period includes a lecture on kanji and hands-on calligraphy practice.

ASIANLAN 136 First Year Korean II

Section 001

Credits: 5
Credit Exclusions: No credit granted to those who have completed or are enrolled in ASIANLAN 137.
Waitlist Capacity: 99
Enforced Prerequisites: ASIANLAN 135.
Repeatability: May not be repeated for credit.
Primary Instructor: Park, Kyongmi

ASIANLAN 136 (First-year Korean II) is a continuation of ASIANLAN 135 (first-year, first-semester Korean). The aim of this course is to provide a solid basis in speaking, listening, reading and writing Korean by building on materials covered in ASIANLAN 135. Cultural material (both deep and surface) will be integrated with language practice activities, and students will learn how to use different speech styles (polite formal and informal, and intimate) in appropriate contexts. In addition to being able to talk about oneself in the past, present, and future tenses, and handle most basic social situations, students will be able to talk (and write) about a variety of topics including weather, food, personality and mood, and clothing, etc. Prerequisite: ASIANLAN 135 or its equivalent language proficiency from the most recent Korean Placement Test.

ASIANLAN 166 First Year Tibetan II

Section 001

Credits: 4
Waitlist Capacity: 99
Enforced Prerequisites: ASIANLAN 165.
Other Course Info: Graduate students should elect BUDDHST 502.
Repeatability: May not be repeated for credit.
Primary Instructor: Tsering, Soram

ASIANLAN 166 is the second term of colloquial Tibetan, standard dialect. Using "Manual of Standard Tibetan", students improve their ability to speak the standard (Central) Tibetan dialect, and to read and write Tibetan. Students are introduced to the use of nominalization and more complex sentence structure. The course is designed to meet the needs of those interested in speaking modern colloquial Tibetan, and to provide a basis for textual studies in classical Tibetan.

| Credit Exclusions: | No credit granted to those who have completed or are enrolled in ASIANLAN 201, 202, or 203. |
| Enforced Prerequisites: | ASIANLAN 201. |
| Lang Req: | This course is part of the Language Requirement sequence. |
| Repeatability: | May not be repeated for credit. |
| Primary Instructor: | Yi, Haiqing |

This course is a continuation of work begun in ASIANLAN 201. Students electing the course should have command of the material presented in the first 8 lessons of "Integrated Chinese" (Level Two). Lessons 9-17 from that text constitute the focus of the Winter course. The primary goals are (a) continued improvement of aural understanding and speaking competence and (b) achievement of a basic level of reading and writing competence. These goals are approached through lectures, classroom exercises/discussion, oral presentations, writing exercises and regular quizzes/tests, collectively covering all four proficiency areas (listening, speaking, reading, writing). Students who are native or near-native Mandarin Chinese speakers are not eligible for this course; they should enroll in ASIANLAN 204, Reading and Writing Chinese II.

ASIANLAN 204

| Enforced Prerequisites: | ASIANLAN 104. |
| Lang Req: | This course is part of the Language Requirement sequence. |
| Repeatability: | May not be repeated for credit. |
| Primary Instructor: | Gu, Karen |

This course, a continuation of ASIANLAN 104, is designed for students with native or near-native speaking ability in Chinese. The class, conducted in Chinese, will meet four hours a week with a focus on reading and writing. Coursework will be graded on the basis of classroom performance, quizzes, tests, and homework assignments. Students are required to register for both a lecture section and a recitation section. Those who have not taken ASIANLAN 104 must have the instructor’s permission in order to register for this course. Most students will receive this permission via a placement test. For test information, please refer to http://www.lsa.umich.edu/asianlanguage/ or contact the instructor. Students who have completed ASIANLAN 204 should be able to read simple articles and write short essays, and merge with students on the regular track into ASIANLAN 301. They should typically register for ASIANLAN 301 (or ASIANLAN 309 in some cases) if they want to continue their Chinese studies.

ASIANLAN 205
Mandarin Pronunciation

Section 001

| Credits: | 2 |
| Waitlist Capacity: | 99 |
| Advisory Prerequisites: | ASIANLAN 101. |
| Repeatability: | May not be repeated for credit. |
| Primary Instructor: | Grande, Laura A S |
| Instructor: | Yin, Haiqing |
This course, designed as a supplement to core Chinese courses and offered both Fall and Winter terms, gives students at varying proficiency levels the opportunity to fine-tune their production of standard Chinese consonants, vowels, and tones. By learning principles of Mandarin syllable structure and articulation, students will learn how to recognize and correct their own pronunciation/tone errors. Rigorous in-class drills and regular mini-quizzes, as well as several oral assignments (recordings submitted on-line), will build students' competence from word- to phrase- to discourse-level accuracy. A semester-initial assessment will identify each student's needs (so that the course can be customized accordingly) while a semester-final evaluation will assess each student's progress. Knowledge of Pinyin Romanization is presumed.

Note: This is strictly a pronunciation course; students aiming to improve their overall proficiency should consider core courses or, to strengthen conversational fluency, ASIANLAN 305 and ASIANLAN 306. Native speakers of Cantonese with advanced literacy should opt for ASIANLAN 307 (which targets pronunciation problems unique to Cantonese speakers and presumes no knowledge of Pinyin) or ASIANLAN 308 (which focuses on Mandarin conversational fluency).

ASIANLAN 226
Second Year Japanese II
Section 001

Credits: 5
Other: Lang Req
Credit Exclusions: No credit granted to those who have completed or are enrolled in ASIANLAN 227 or 229 or RCLANG 296.
Enforced Prerequisites: ASIANLAN 225.
Lang Req: This course is part of the Language Requirement sequence. Repeatability: May not be repeated for credit.
Primary Instructor: Sakakibara, Yoshimi

This course provides further training in the core language skills (speaking, listening, reading and writing) for students who have acquired basic language proficiency. Deeper nuances of Japanese culture will be introduced (some by means of video clips in Japanese) and discussions conducted on the social and cultural use of language. Drill sessions are conducted only in Japanese and emphasize mastery of somewhat more complex structures than in the first year. Lectures are given primarily in Japanese. The end-of-year project is a Japanese skit contest, for which prizes are given.

Intensive Japanese II
Section 001

Credits: 10
Other: Lang Req
Credit Exclusions: No credit granted to those who have completed or are enrolled in ASIANLAN 225, 226, and 227.
Advisory Prerequisites: ASIANLAN 129 or RCLANG 196.
Lang Req: This course is part of the Language Requirement sequence.
Repeatability: May not be repeated for credit.
Cross-Listed Classes: RCLANG – Intense Japanese II, Section 001
Primary Instructor: Sato, Tetsuya

This course is designed for you to learn Novice-High/Intermediate-Low-level Japanese language in an intensive, semi-immersion setting. It is "intense" because we will study a normally two-term amount of materials in one. It is "semi-immersion" in that in our classroom we constantly simulate authentic communicative interactions with speakers of Japanese, and will use the target language as much as possible while minimizing the use of English. Through extensive communication practice in classroom activities, we will work on developing all four skills (listening, speaking, reading, and writing, using hiragana, katakana and approximately 350 kanji) along with cultural understanding. Most course-related activities are collaborative in nature. You will learn to acquire a sentence/paragraph-level command in various topics around everyday life for college students and beyond. You are also required to attend minimum three hours of co-curricular activities, such as the Lunch Tables and Conversation Tables, per week. (Prerequisites: successful completion of RCLANG196/ASIANLAN129: Intensive Japanese I or its equivalent. In order to undertake ASIANLAN325: Third Year Japanese, you must pass the Placement Test at the Department of Asian Languages and Cultures).

ASIANLAN 236   Second Year Korean II
Section 001

Credits: 5
Other: Lang Req
Credit Exclusions: No credit granted to those who have completed or are enrolled in ASIANLAN 237.
Waitlist Capacity: 99
Enforced Prerequisites: ASIANLAN 235.
Lang Req: This course is part of the Language Requirement sequence. Repeatability: May not be repeated for credit.
Primary Instructor: Han, Sangkyung

ASIANLAN 236 (Second-year Korean II) is a continuation of ASIANLAN 235. In this class, students will consolidate knowledge of basic grammar and extend the range of grammar and vocabulary acquired in first year Korean and ASIANLAN 235. Speaking, listening, reading, and writing are equally emphasized in this course in order to develop well-balanced functional proficiency in Korean. Through various in-class and out of class activities and assignments, students will have ample opportunities to develop communication skills in writing and speaking that are grammatically accurate and pragmatically appropriate. Various authentic materials such as movies, literature, cartoon, etc., are integrated in this course to expose students to different aspects of Korean culture.

Prerequisite: ASIANLAN 235 or its equivalent language proficiency from the most recent Korean Placement Test.

ASIANLAN 238   Reading and Writing Korean II
Section 001

Credits: 5
Other: Lang Req
Credit Exclusions: No credit granted to those who have completed or are enrolled in ASIANLAN 235, 236, or 237.
Waitlist Capacity: 99
Advisory Prerequisites: ASIANLAN 138.
Lang Req: This course is part of the Language Requirement sequence.
Repeatability: May not be repeated for credit.
Primary Instructor: Jung, Hunjin

ASIANLAN 238 (Reading and Writing Korean II) is a continuation of ASIANLAN 138. This course is designed for heritage students who can command daily-based Korean but whose language is relatively inaccurate or sometimes inappropriate depending on contexts and contents. Within one semester, this course covers language and culture topics which are equivalent to the curricula of the second-year Korean courses (ASIANLAN 235 and 236). Through various course materials and activities, students will have opportunities to develop communication skills in speaking and writing that are grammatically accurate and pragmatically appropriate by noticing any gaps between their heritage language and the standard Modern Korean. Various authentic materials such as movies, TV shows, video clips, cartoons, and songs will be integrated in this course to help students expand their prior knowledge on Korea and Korean culture.
Second Year Tibetan II

Section 001

Credits: 4
Other: Lang Req
Waitlist Capacity: 99
Enforced Prerequisites: ASIANLAN 265.
Lang Req: This course is part of the Language Requirement sequence. Repeatability: May not be repeated for credit.
Primary Instructor: Tsering, Sonam

This is a continuation of ASIANLAN 265. It is expected that students will complete the study of Manual of Standard Tibetan by the beginning of this semester. Students will memorize parts of a Tibetan grammar text (Legs bshad ljon dbang) to facilitate reading, read a modern Tibetan story (Don grub rgyal's Tulku) to become more familiar with the complexities of spoken Tibetan in the modern context, and decide on one other short text for study and discussion. Students will be expected to attain an intermediate proficiency in speaking, reading, and writing the Tibetan language for successful completion of this course.

Third Year Chinese II

Section 001

Credits: 5
Credit Exclusions: No credit granted to those who have completed or are enrolled in ASIANLAN 303 or 304.
Waitlist Capacity: 99
Enforced Prerequisites: ASIANLAN 301.
Repeatability: May not be repeated for credit.
Primary Instructor: Zhao, Quili

This course is the continuation of ASIANLAN 301. The class meets five hours per week. All the four aspects of the language—listening, speaking, reading, and writing—are emphasized. The textbook "A New Chinese Coursebook (II)" covers main aspects of contemporary Chinese society and culture, and enhances cultural awareness in terms of language training. Students are required to register for both a lecture section and a recitation section. Coursework is evaluated on the basis of daily attendance, exercises, homework, an oral presentation, a writing project, quizzes, and tests. The class is conducted mainly in Chinese. Native or near-native speakers of Chinese who want to improve their reading and writing skills should take ASIANLAN 304, Reading and Writing Chinese III.

Third Year Chinese for Mandarin Speakers

Section 001

Credits: 4
Waitlist Capacity: 99
Enforced Prerequisites: ASIANLAN 204.
Other Course Info: Taught in Chinese.
Repeatability: May not be repeated for credit.
Primary Instructor: Li, Jinyi

The emphasis of training is in reading and writing although oral activities remain part of the course requirement. The textbook, A New Chinese Course, carries authentic articles reflecting various aspects of life in contemporary China. Students will be exposed to advanced-level language structures, expressive styles, and cultural knowledge relevant to selected topics. It is expected that, assisted by web searches for up-to-date information as well as classroom discussions, students will build their vocabulary and sentence patterns from each lesson, and learn to recognize and use a variety of linguistic registers in both their oral and writing practice.
Intended Audience: This course is designed for students of Chinese with native or near-native oral performance.

Advanced Spoken Chinese II

Section 001

Credits: 2
Waitlist Capacity: 99
Enforced Prerequisites: ASIANLAN 202 or 203 or 305.
Repeatability: May not be repeated for credit.
Primary Instructor: Liu, Wei

Course Requirements: Evaluation is based on in-class participation, aural/oral assignments, and oral presentations.

Intended Audience: This course is a sequel to ASIANLAN 305 but does not have ASIANLAN 305 as a prerequisite. Like ASIANLAN 305, it is designed as a spoken supplement to post-second-year Chinese core courses and is intended to help non-native-speaking students strengthen their oral/aural competence. Native speakers of Cantonese with advanced literacy should take ASIANLAN 307 and/or ASIANLAN 308.

Class Format: Students will meet two hours a week. Class sessions are structured around themes, integrating theme introduction, vocabulary building, discussions, and student presentations.

Section 001

Credits: 4
Waitlist Capacity: 99
Enforced Prerequisites: ASIANLAN 301 or 304.
Repeatability: May not be repeated for credit.
Primary Instructor: Chen, Qinghai

With a rising Greater China (including the PRC, Taiwan, and Hong Kong) on the world economic, political, and cultural stages, learning about its current affairs while studying the Chinese language becomes more and more important. Chinese media disseminated widely in the form of newspapers, television and radio programs, and movies – often accessible via internet- provide ideal resources for this purpose. This course consists of two major elements. On the one hand, the textbook Chinese Breakthrough introduces basic vocabulary, news forms, and cultural knowledge through its well-selected and organized lessons covering topics from politics, economies, and culture to sports. On the other hand, after acquiring the ability to decode news items, students will be helped to search for the latest news from a variety of media on their own.

Credit Exclusions: No credit granted to those who have completed or are enrolled in ASIANLAN 327 (or JAPANESE 411).
Waitlist Capacity: 99
Enforced Prerequisites: ASIANLAN 325.
Repeatability: May not be repeated for credit.

ASIANLAN 326 is a continuation course of ASIANLAN 325. This course aims to further develop the four language skills (reading, speaking, listening, and writing) at upper-intermediate level, to deepen the understanding of Japan’s diverse culture, and to be familiarized with various styles of language use with the help of the textbook, Tobira.
Gateway to Advanced Japanese. The main emphasis of training is in accurate comprehension of written language combined with oral and written communication activities. Approximately 200 new kanji are introduced.

Required materials:
- Tobira: Gateway to Advanced Japanese; Learning Through Content and Multimedia
- Kitaeyo kanjiryoku: Power Up Your Kanji

Course Requirements: The end-of-year project is a group or individual research project..

ASIANLAN 336 (Third-year Korean II) is a continuation of ASIANLAN 335. The goal of this course is to help students gain competence in communicating in Korean with grammatical accuracy and socio-linguistic appropriateness in various components of the language - speaking, listening, reading, and writing - at an advanced intermediate level. In this course, students will enhance their communicative ability in order to deal with complicated and abstract ideas. They will gain the ability to perform some selected practical tasks through the medium of Korean at an appropriate level of complexity. Along with various topics to better understand Korea and Korean culture, students will expand their appropriate use of grammar, vocabulary, Chinese characters, and useful expressions through class activities and authentic materials such as films, TV drama, newspaper articles, and literature.

ASIANLAN 402, the second part of the fourth-year Chinese language core courses, is intended to help students with three and a half years of Chinese studies to further develop their language ability in modern Chinese. All aspects of the language – listening, speaking, reading, and writing – are emphasized by way of carefully selected texts and meticulously developed exercises in the textbook Advanced Chinese: Intention, Strategy, and Communication. Through various forms of language activities, students are expected not only to read original materials with less reliance on a dictionary and at a faster speed, but also to improve their productive skills, oral and written, at the discourse and rhetorical levels. Another objective of the course is to enhance students’ cultural awareness. Classes are conducted in Chinese. Assessment will be based on attendance, participation, homework, tests, and exams. Students of ASIANLAN 402 are encouraged (but not required) to take ASIANLAN 306, Advanced Spoken Chinese II, simultaneously. Native-speaking Chinese students interested in improving their comprehensive foundation in the language can also benefit from this course.

This course is the continuation of ASIANLAN 405, Chinese for the Professions I (usually offered in the fall semester). ASIANLAN 405, which provides language training by way of a comprehensive introduction to China’s economic situation and business environment, is a knowledge-based course that emphasizes reading and discussion. This course, however, is a task-based and computer-assisted course with an emphasis on “learning by doing.” Under the instructor’s guidance, students will be challenged by a number of real-world tasks, which are designed in five modules, namely, news report, commercial language design, business letter-writing, oral presentation, and job interview. All the activities and assignments are intended to facilitate language use in the real business world as well as further studies of Chinese for specific purposes.

Class Format: Classes are conducted in Chinese and feature collaborative learning and peer feedback.

ASIANLAN 408  Chinese Translation and Presentation
Section 001
Credits: 3
Waitlist Capacity: 99
Advisory Prerequisites: ASIANLAN 402, 405, 406, 407, or permission of instructor. Repeatability: May not be repeated for credit.
Primary Instructor: Yin, Haiqing

ASIANLAN 408 can be regarded as a sequel to ASIANLAN 407 “Academic Chinese I,” but does not have ASIANLAN 407 as an enforced prerequisite. Like ASIANLAN 407, this advanced language course is designed for students who want to further improve their Chinese competence to serve academic or other career purposes. It has a different focus, however, to provide training in translation and presentation skills needed by students’ current studies and future endeavors. In this course, besides unified requirements based on assigned topics and provided texts, students will be allowed and encouraged to combine Chinese language study with studies in their own disciplines. The class will meet twice per week, conducted solely in Chinese.

Crs Requirements: Weekly translation assignments and two presentations will be required along with study of samples, instructor’s comments, and classroom discussions. Evaluation is based on attendance, participation, and translation and presentation assignments.

Intended Audience: Students who want to improve Chinese translation and presentation skills to serve academic or other career purposes

Class Format: 3 hours of recitation class per week

ASIANLAN 409  Literary Chinese I
Section 001
Credits: 3
Waitlist Capacity: 99
Advisory Prerequisites: ASIANLAN 202 or 203.
Repeatability: May not be repeated for credit.
Primary Instructor: Zhao, Qiuli
For more than three thousand years, down to the early 20th century, the vast majority of Chinese texts were written in Literary Chinese (wenyanwen). Literary Chinese also served for many centuries as the international written language for the countries of East Asia. Literature in Literary Chinese is an important part of the cultural heritage of all humankind. This course is designed to serve the needs of both undergraduate and graduate students, of both specialists (and would-be specialists) and those who are just curious about the Chinese literary heritage. Reading materials for ASIANLAN 409 include a textbook, supplemented by occasional handouts. Students will be introduced to many famous works of Chinese literature, such as have been memorized and chanted by Chinese down through the ages. Requirements include regular exercises, a midterm, and a final.

ASIANLAN 426   Media Japanese II
Section 001
Credits: 3
Waitlist Capacity: 99
Enforced Prerequisites: ASIANLAN 425.
Repeatability: May not be repeated for credit.
Primary Instructor: Sakakibara, Yoshimi

This course focuses on the acquisition of linguistic, pragmatic, and socio-cultural competence in all four skills (speaking, listening, reading, and writing) at an advanced level. A variety of media resources such as television news, newspapers, Internet sites and films will be used in order to further develop speaking, reading, writing and listening skills. Thus, there are no textbooks or required materials for this course.

Course Requirements: Written compositions will be assigned as homework. The end-of-year project is an individual research project.

Class Format: The class period is devoted to the use of new vocabulary and expressions as well as the acquisition of more complex, advanced grammar patterns, along with discussion of the content of the readings.

ASIANLAN 430   Japanese through Business and Social Topics II
Section 001
Credits: 3
Waitlist Capacity: 99
Enforced Prerequisites: ASIANLAN 429.
Repeatability: May not be repeated for credit.
Rackham Information: Rackham credit requires additional work.
Primary Instructor: Kondo, Junko

ASIANLAN 430 is a continuation course of ASIANLAN429. This course provides advanced integrated study of speaking, listening, reading, and writing with practical approaches considering usage in the real professional world. It aims to improve students’ communicative competence (both accurate and culturally appropriate usage of the language), accurate comprehension of written and spoken Japanese, and effective presentation of their opinions about the topics discussed in class. The course uses authentic materials and deals with various topics including business cultures, customs, cross-cultural and inter-personal communications, and current affairs.

ASIANLAN 432   Japanese Pedagogy for Beginners
Section 001
Credits: 3
Waitlist Capacity: 99
Advisory Prerequisites: 4th year proficiency in Japanese Language.
Repeatability: May not be repeated for credit.
This course is an introduction to Japanese language pedagogy. As a methodology course, its content will focus on language teaching methods and approaches. It also will provide an overview of Japanese discourse, writing systems, pronunciation, grammatical structure, etc. from the view of language teaching. Class activities include: 1) analysis of textbooks, reference books and internet learning materials; 2) learning of language evaluation methods for the ACTFL-OPI; 3) reviewing of Japanese syntax and semantics; 4) development of teaching materials; 5) discussion of effective and efficient language teaching techniques; 6) conducting of classroom observations and observation reports; 7) making of lesson plans and teaching demonstrations. It will also require quizzes, homework, and a final paper. The ultimate aims of this course are to educate and assist participants to become competitive job candidates and qualified teachers of the Japanese language at all levels, from K-12 and private language schools to the college or university.

Intended Audience: Students who are proficient in Japanese and who are interested in developing pedagogy skills for teaching the Japanese language; PhD or Center for Japanese Studies (CJS) MA students or advanced undergraduates. Non-UM Japanese language speakers/teachers are welcome to enroll as guest students.

Waitlist Capacity: 99
Enforced Prerequisites: ASIANLAN 326; (B+>)
Advisory Prerequisites: ASIANLAN 326. For non-native speakers of Japanese: JLPT N2, Placement test, and/or knowledge of 800 kanji. For non-native speakers of English: TOEFL IBT 100 or above.
Repeatability: May not be repeated for credit.
Primary Instructor: Mochizuki, Yoshihiro

This course is designed to be a translation course complimentary to the language curriculum. It is aimed at students who have completed the equivalent of three years of Japanese language study at the University of Michigan, as well as student of native-speaking ability in Japanese and near-native fluency in English. The objective is to help students of advanced-level Japanese develop and improve their translation skills. By the end of the course, students will have acquired the basic tools necessary to translate from the source to the target language, as well as respecting the accuracy of the original text in content, style, syntax and tone without being literal. The course provides training in translation tasks, approaches, and professional translation practices, ethics, and methods. Students will be generalist translators, rather than specialists. After the completion of the course, they will develop more specific translation skills on their own in their fields, such as graduate schools and professional workplaces.

It should be noted that the focus is mostly on practical translation, rather than literary translation of prose, fiction, novels, poems, and others. The course will not treat translation of visual materials, such as films, TV shows, and anime. Within this limited focus, however, course materials will cover a very wide range of genres and styles, such as history of translation, the modern-day theory of translation, academic articles of various fields, business documents, newspapers, magazines, advertisements, manga, weblogs, product manuals, and others. The course content will cover such topics as translation history, theory, and approaches, strategies for reading Japanese, practice of translation, commercial and legal translation, scientific and technical translation, case study in translation, and discussion of specific translation problems.

Course Requirements: Translation workshop and in-class discussion of specific translation problems; translation assignments must be completed in time for class discussion (40%). Midterm and final exams (30%) to evaluate whether students have acquired and can apply the appropriate strategies of translation covered in the course. A final translation project (20%), in which students will choose a passage of their own interest, translate the text, and give a presentation on the final product, discussing difficulties, challenges, and problems they encountered. Regular attendance is required with classroom participation and performance (10%).

Intended Audience: Upper-level undergraduates and graduate students who have or will have some experience in Japanese translation but have never been formally trained. Students must have a strong command of both Japanese and English.

Section 001

Credits: 3
Waitlist Capacity: 99
Advisory Prerequisites: ASIANLAN 402 or 4th year proficiency.
Repeatability: May not be repeated for credit.
Primary Instructor: Li, Jinyi
This course is an introduction to Chinese language pedagogy. As a methodology course, content will focus on methods and approaches, with direct application of teaching being discussed and practiced. It will improve the exposure of prospective teachers to the most up-to-date pedagogical theories and categories, including teaching approach, method, syllabus, technique, and exercise of language teaching. More importantly, it seeks to enhance students' basic and actual teaching skills needed to satisfactorily instruct students in different Chinese language courses at different levels. Class activities include discussion of assigned reading materials and class observation. Students give their own teaching demos, and presentations are a crucial part of the course content. The ultimate aim of this course is to educate and assist participants to be competitive job candidates and qualified teachers for Chinese language teaching at college and university, K-12, and private language schools.

Course Requirements: In discussion sessions, the instructor will give a brief lecture on the assigned topic, allowing for questions and participation. Activities include discussion of assigned reading materials and class observation. Students must give two teaching presentations. Other classmates will role play as students. The way students design their teaching demos should be based on their thoughts after reading and discussion. After each teaching demo, classmates will offer critique and comments in terms of class design, the application of teaching approach, the instructor’s performance, students’ reactions, and how efficiently and effectively the class achieved its goal. Students are given a journal writing assignment after each discussion.

Intended Audience: Students who are proficient in Chinese and interested in developing pedagogy skills for teaching the language. Potential students may be from LSA and the School of Education, as well as teachers and prospective teachers in other educational organizations of our community.

Class Format: 3 hours weekly in lecture/discussion format: 1st hour, a brief lecture followed by discussion; 2nd hour, two prepared teaching demos; and 3rd hour, discussion of the teaching demos. Additional instructional methodologies include videos, classroom observations, and guest speakers.

This course will examine the present state of research in selected areas of scholarly inquiry in Chinese studies – language, literature, history, religion material culture, and art history – as we interrogate such seemingly commonsense notions as "civilization," "culture," "tradition," "modernity," and above all, "Chineseness." Our goals are to develop good treading skills, stimulate critical thinking, and inspire imaginative approaches to humanistic problems.

Grading:  Grading basis of 'S' or 'U'.
Repeatability:  May not be repeated for credit.

The Master's thesis is a substantial research paper reflecting interdisciplinary training and the ability to use Western language literature and Chinese language sources. Thesis research is undertaken under the supervision of a faculty or research associate of the Center of Chinese Studies, usually in the last term of the degree program.

Master's Essay
All M.A. students are expected to complete a substantial research paper reflecting interdisciplinary training and the ability to use the Western language literature and Chinese language sources. The essay must be read and approved by two Center for Chinese Studies faculty members from different disciplines, normally including the advisor, both of whom will grade the thesis. It is the student's responsibility to identify the two faculty members who will agree to serve as readers of the student's thesis. Students who complete the thesis while enrolled are encouraged to register for the thesis writing class in the department of their thesis advisor.

Under exceptional circumstances, students may petition to submit two shorter research papers to substitute for the Master's thesis. The papers can be based on those originally written for a graduate class, and should be of "A" quality. The student's faculty advisor should help the student evaluate what revisions to course papers are necessary to make them of appropriate length and quality. A student intending to file such a petition should consult with the Associate Director of CCS ahead of time to determine whether his or her circumstances merit such a petition. The petition itself should include a formal letter of request and be accompanied by complete copies of both papers. The papers will be reviewed by two faculty readers appointed by the CCS Associate Director.

How many friends do you have on Facebook? How many of them do you consider to be real friends? How does the quality of our interactions affect our relationships with others? How do our relationships with our parents, friends, teachers and fellow students affect how we grow and change? How do these relationships affect our self-esteem, sense of dignity and wellbeing?

In this course we will read texts and watch movies that draw from a variety of genres and cultural contexts in order to ask these kinds of questions, and explore what we can learn about ourselves through our relationships with others. Some examples of these texts are: the graphic novel American Born Chinese by Gene Luen Young (which will take us, briefly, into the Chinese legend of the Monkey King and the world of kung fu movies), a novel (and its film adaptation) by Belgian writer Amélie Nothomb and essays and short stories by James Baldwin and Eileen Chang (Zhang Ailing). We will also examine how social networking sites and other technologies work as texts.

As a writing-intensive course, we will draw from our variety of sources in order to develop writing projects that focus on how we communicate with others in different contexts. We will use individual projects, class discussions and workshops to develop analytical skills, creative arguments and well-articulated essays.

Primary Instructor: Chetwynd, Alistair Michael C

It’s been said that ‘A stranger comes into town’ and ‘A man goes on a journey’ are the two basic plots to which all fiction can be reduced. In this class, we’ll examine why strangeness, outsider perspectives and encounters with the unfamiliar are so foundational to the experience and analysis of fiction. Whether we are all strangers to each other is a fundamental question, but why do we so often turn to literature to help answer it? Why is it so often fiction through which authors new to a culture make claims for their people’s representation? Why should fiction be so central to the psychological lives of people who feel alienated or uncomfortable within their own cultures?

We’ll stalk an oblivious man through the teeming streets with Edgar Allen Poe, attempt to understand the unjustified violence of Flannery O’Connor’s world, live in the mind of an animal with Franz Kafka, rewrite the frontier Western with EL Doctorow, and re-see both America and China through Maxine Hong Kingston’s rewriting of her immigrant ancestry, as we spend the academic term discovering why the encounter with or the viewpoint of the outsider are so crucial to literature.

We’ll explore central human questions like ‘why fear a stranger’ and ‘what do we owe a stranger who asks for our help’, while we also examine many of the basic principles and values of written narrative. From the connections between texts and the cultures that produce them, to the relationships established between readers and authors, to the question of whether literature truly lets us see through someone else’s eyes, we’ll be pondering how our interactions with stories and our interactions with people overlap.

By the end of the course you’ll have developed analytical tools that help you better understand the role that fiction plays in your own relation to the various strange cultures amid which you live.

This course will examine the present state of research in selected areas of scholarly inquiry in Chinese studies – language, literature, history, religion, material culture, and art history – as we interrogate such seemingly commonsense notions as "civilization," "culture," "tradition," "modernity," and above all, "Chineseness." Our goals are to develop good treading skills, stimulate critical thinking, and inspire imaginative approaches to humanistic problems.

In this seminar, we will utilize a comparative perspective in considering the role of the visual arts within popular religion in Europe and Japan during the Medieval and Early Modern periods. We will interrogate categories of “art” and “popular religion” in relation to specific cultural and theoretical discourses, both historical and modern. We will pay special attention to how period texts and images associate popular religious practices with superstition, ignorance, misbehavior, rusticity, and the transgression of orthodox belief. In studies of various cultures, “popular religion” is often understood as a binary term with diverse and contradictory associations: extra-liturgical, traditional, indigenous, subaltern, mass, etc. Art historians of both East Asia and Europe have tended to conceive of popular religious art in terms of a “high-low” binary dependent on a quality criterion, rather than on socioeconomic, cultural, and historical considerations. Popular religious art is thus characterized as evincing little skill, a lack of expressive power, misinterpretation of orthodox beliefs, cheap manufacture, and the utilization of mechanical reproduction. This criterion of quality often leads to the designation as “popular” objects that were, in fact, historically situated within elite, learned, and dominant cultural spheres. Our class will challenge these categories and consider more fruitful and historically accurate ways to understand visual culture that often has been left out of the purview of art history.

Course Requirements: Course requirements include weekly participation in the seminar discussions, a class presentation, and a final research paper. Students may choose to write their papers on popular religion and visual art from the historical and cultural context of their choice.

Intended Audience: This is a graduate seminar for specialists and non-specialists. Cross-cultural comparisons and creative methodological and theoretical engagements are integral to this course, so students from a variety of disciplines and backgrounds are encouraged to participate.

Class Format: Seminar

History

HISTORY 196
First Year Seminar in Social Sciences
Women in Modern China

Course Note: A basic introduction to historical thinking and method through small-course seminar experience. Topics vary from term to term; however, no matter what the topic, students can expect to spend a great deal of time learning to think critically about historical questions and to write well. As such, the First-Year
This seminar will introduce you to recent scholarship on women in China from the 19th century to the present. Having survived the Opium War and Sino-Japanese War in the 19th century, China entered the twentieth century with agitation to topple the imperial dynasty, experienced a communist revolution, and ended the century joining global capitalism. How did women live through wars, revolutions, and dramatic social, economic, political and cultural transformations? We will explore changes in diverse groups of women's lives in China's pursuit of modernity as well as analyze methods and frameworks used by authors in approaching their various subject matters. The course aims to enhance students' understanding of complicated historical processes in which women and representation of women have played a central role in transformations of gender construction, family, work, cultural production, social organization, and state formation. The course will end with an examination of Chinese feminist activism today. All readings are in English, which will be supplemented with a variety of visual materials shown in class. The seminar expects students to actively participate in discussions in class.

Students are asked to keep a structured journal, write a deep analysis of an illustrated children’s book, and write a major essay on a general topic in the field, and, of course, participate vigorously.

Introduction to Japanese Civilization
Section 001

Credits: 4
Requirements & Distribution: HU
Advisory Prerequisites: A knowledge of Japanese is not required.
Repeatability: May not be repeated for credit.
Cross Listed Classes: Asian 200 – Intro Jpn Civilization Section 001
Primary Instructor: Auerbach, Micah Lewis

This course introduces selected aspects of Japanese civilization, from prehistory to the present. We will use written texts, visual sources, film and television, music, and Japanese popular culture to delve into the "history" that is "Japanese" "culture," which all terms that we will explore critically throughout the term.

Course Requirements: Course assignments are to include midterm and final examinations, as well as regular short writing assignments.

Intended Audience: No prerequisites. Knowledge of Japanese history, language, and culture helpful but not necessary.

HISTORY 205
Modern East Asia
Section 001

Credits: 4
Requirements & Distribution: SS
Other: WorldLit
This course is an introduction to modern China, Korea, and Japan from 1600 to the present, with emphasis on the nineteenth and twentieth centuries. It covers the following topics: China's progressive decline and rejuvenation, the impact of imperialism, the rise and development of the PRC; the struggles of Korea, its colonization by Japan; liberation and division into the two Koreas, and the rising economic status of the South; and the end of feudalism in Japan, the building of a modern state and economy, Japanese imperialism, postwar recovery, and the rise to superpower status. Taking a broad comparative perspective on East Asia, the course explores the inter-relations between political economy, society, and culture in each country within an emerging modern world system. This is a continuation of HISTORY 204; however that course is not a prerequisite and no previous background on the subject is required. Two lectures and one discussion section each week. There will be a midterm and final exam.

This course will examine the politics and culture of the Cold War within the United States as well as U.S. foreign policy abroad. We will consider popular culture (such as cartoons, films, novels), in order to examine gender, race, and sexuality, material culture, and the machinations of governments, spies and covert operations. We will also focus on the government-sponsored cultural programs that sent everything from jazz bands to modern art traveling throughout the globe. We will look at the private initiatives of American citizens in shaping U.S. relations with other nations, such as missionaries and international adoption agencies. In all cases, we will attempt to treat politics and culture with equal seriousness and rigor.

Course Requirements: In addition to two in-class midterms and a take home final, all students will participate in a group project, where small groups will examine and analysis and examine a product of Cold War culture.

HISTORY 392/592 is a “topics course” for upper-division undergraduates and graduate students. This term, we will explore concepts of the natural world and histories of the environment in Japan, from early modern to modern times. The course will begin by looking at historical practices of representing and imagining the natural world, ranging from the visual arts, Japanese garden design, literature, and knowledge production. The focus then turns to changing understandings of the land and the living world manifested in agriculture and forestry, particularly during the Tokugawa era. As we move into modernity, we will trace the multiple effects of industrialization and social modernization on the natural environment. Through a series of case studies, from the Ashio copper mines pollution case at the turn of the century to the Minamata mercury poisoning disaster and beyond, we will study how Japanese governments and citizens have responded to the degradation of the non-human living world.

We will be reading key works from a newly emerging field of Japanese environmental history as well as seminal texts primarily from the more developed field of American environmental history to help us develop comparative and conceptual frameworks.

The readings will be available in multiple formats: Electronic resources on CTools, Library Reserves, and a limited number of books for purchase.

Course Requirements: You will be asked to write short, weekly response papers as well as a longer final essay.

Class Format: This seminar-style course is a collaborative endeavor to explore questions and issues emerging from the readings. The task of presenting texts and facilitating discussion will be divided among members of the class, with student sharing areas of interest and expertise. The class will also include several hands-on sessions in the U-M Art Museum and Clements Library as well as a small roster of eminent guest speakers.

This course examines the history of early 20th-century China through the lives and careers of several individuals whose ideas and actions changed the course of national destiny. The uniqueness of the course is that someone who lived through that period and has personally known most of the lead characters of that drama tells the story. "I was there, I played the game, and I now tell you the story!"

Following China’s defeat in the Opium war 1839-42, the Sino-British treaty of Nanjing opened five coastal cities for foreign trade and foreign residents. These “treaty ports,” as they were called at the time, grew dramatically in number and a number of treaty ports were also opened in Japan and Korea. While the treaty ports were only a relatively brief episode in Japanese and Korean history, the Chinese treaty ports would remain China’s primary contact zone with the West for a century. The treaty ports have left a complex and contentious legacy in China. On one hand, the treaty ports in many ways defined the urban experience and most of the ports developed into islands of prosperity which stood in sharp contrast to China’s vast hinterland. On the other hand, the treaty ports were bastions of foreign privilege and influence and many of the open ports gave birth to China’s first nationalist movements. The treaty ports were a formative episode in East Asia’s encounter with the modern West and understanding the treaty ports is essential for understanding modern East Asia.

This course will explore the treaty ports by reading recent scholarship in the field as well as selected primary sources in English. While the primary focus will be on China, Japanese and Korean treaty ports will also be discussed where applicable. The course will be both thematically and chronologically organized, and it will cover the years 1790-1950. Audio visual materials will be used in class and one visit to the Asia library will also be arranged.

Course Requirements: Grades will be based on active participation in class and two papers.

Intended Audience: No knowledge of Asian languages is required. Graduate students who possess knowledge in Chinese or Japanese and wish to use these languages to write their papers will have the opportunity to take this class as HISTORY 592. Chinese and Japanese texts will be chosen in consultation with the instructor.

Through extensive readings in Asian American history, this course surveys scholarship and theoretical debates dating from the origins of ethnic studies in the 1960s to the present. We will examine the histories of diverse groups — including Chinese, Korean, South Asian, Southeast Asian, Filipino, and Japanese Americans — as well as the history of Asian Americans as a panethnic, coalitional identity. Our discussions of historiography and epistemology will begin with the following questions:

• How does the study of Asian Americans challenges historians to rethink issues of race, class, nation, gender, and sexuality?
• Why and how did the original vision of Asian American Studies emphasize social history and community studies?
• What have Asian American historians learned from interdisciplinary approaches?
• How have literary theory and cultural studies influenced recent and current work?
• How is globalization reshaping the way with think of Asian America?
• Why is Asian American Studies pivotal to developing a transnational awareness of history, culture, and politics.
• What is the future direction of the field?

This course examines correlations between language use and social interaction in the Japanese context. Topics include language planning and standardization, regional and social variation of language, education and bilingualism, language endangerment, construction of women’s language, polite speech, and language and gender. This course explores Japan as a multilingual society where a growing awareness of social hybridity, life-style heterogeneity and cultural crossing has been observed in recent years. By positing Japan as a multilingual society, this course reexamines such basic concepts as ‘nation’ and ‘tradition.’

This course examines selected languages of Asia and what they can tell us about the societies that have used them: how they work, how they are distributed geographically and socially, how they are connected to each other, how (and whether) they have been written, what their status has been, and how all these things have changed in response to historical processes. We will focus primarily on East, South, and Southeast Asia. The course is organized into four main parts:

- Preliminaries (basic geography and history, basic linguistic concepts)
- Asian language families
- Writing systems
- Language in culture and politics

Course Requirements: Course requirements include regular reading assignments, homework exercises, occasional quizzes (not always announced in advance), class presentations, two 6-8 page papers, and active participation in class.

Intended Audience: There are no prerequisites; no previous knowledge of Asian languages is assumed and all required readings will be in English.

The Arts and Letters of China
Section 001

This interdisciplinary and multimedia course is taught jointly by faculty specialists in Chinese philosophy, religion, cultural history, history of art, drama, literature, and visual culture. It is not a survey course. Instead, the main task will be the sustained and critical study of a number of significant and representative works in order to present some major themes and art forms of the distinct and complex civilizations of China. In spite of inner tensions, this is a cultural tradition that can be seen as a highly integrated system composed of mutually reinforcing parts, making such an interdisciplinary and multimedia approach particularly effective. Toward the end of the term we will observe the system's collapse as it struggles to adapt to the modern world, and consider how our themes continue, persist, or change. We will conclude our course with discussions of art, poetry, and cinema from contemporary China. Background lectures on language and early culture will be followed by topics and readings that include: “Confucianism” (Confucius and Mencius); “Daoism” (Laozi and Zhuangzi); the art of argumentation; themes in Chinese religiosity; Chan (Zen) Buddhism; lyricism and visual experience in poetry and painting; music; traditional short fiction; literati and popular theater; modern fiction and culture; and film.

Course Requirements: occasional brief responses to readings, three short papers, and a final exam.
Intended Audience: There are no prerequisites for this course.

Class Format: The format of the course consists of three hours of lectures and one hour of discussion. The lectures will be given by:

- Baxter (language)
- Brown (early culture)
- Lam (music)
- Lin (“Daoism,” poetry, and garden)
- Tang (modern culture and literature)
- Nornes (film)
- Powers (painting)
- Brose (religion)
- Rolston (theater and traditional fiction)

Meeting the surging energy needs of their citizens represents one of the most daunting challenges facing governments across the developing world. Given the severity of budget constraints, limits on resource availability, and pressures to limit environmental impacts, how do governments decide how to distribute or ration energy to citizens and industry? Political parties are the key link between the government and the governed. Even non-democratic governments often attempt to acquire the patina of legitimacy by calling their official organizations "parties". In examining the "supply-side" of electoral politics, this course examines the impact of political institutions and popular pressures on political parties and the influence of political parties on governmental and policy. We examine four different aspects of party politics: a) the rise and development of political parties, b) their internal life and organizational forms, c) party competition, and d) party governance. This course will also introduce different theoretical approaches to the study of party politics, and examine the methodological questions that arise.

Schooling practices provide a key window into what societies value, as well as into the experiences that shape the next generation of adults. This course will mix instruction on research methods for studying educational settings with hands-on experience conducting research in schools. Students will complete two projects, one using data from large-scale international studies of educational achievement and classroom practices (TIMSS & PISA), and the other a study conducted in a school setting.

The second study will be a cross-cultural one, conducted in collaboration with small groups of students taking a similar course at Beijing Normal University. Students will collaborate with their counterpart group to collect data bearing on educational issues of interest in each country.

This course is part of the UM Global Course Connections (GCC) program, which will optionally provide students with the opportunity to go to Beijing in May and work with their counterpart students to compare results of the studies done in both settings. Students who go on the GCC trip will also have the opportunity to visit Chinese educational settings and work on a service project in schools that serve a migrant population, as well as visiting a variety of Chinese cultural settings in and around Beijing. We will also take a group trip to another Chinese city as part of the experience.

No previous language or culture experience with China is required, nor is participation in the trip. Grades will be based on a mixture of individual papers, a midterm test on research methods, and contribution to the group projects.

This is a performance course on Chinese instrumental music. Students will be given individual lessons (15 minutes per session) on Chinese musical instruments, which include but are not limited to the erhu (fiddle), dizi (flute), pipa (lute), and percussion. Students will learn not only basic techniques in playing the instruments which are provided, but also standard compositions of the repertory. Once the students have mastered the basic techniques, they will start to rehearse together and prepare for an end-of-the-term concert.

Course Requirements: Students will be evaluated by their attendance, their learning of performance techniques and repertory, and performance at the end of the term concert.

This interdisciplinary and multimedia course is taught jointly by faculty specialists in Chinese philosophy, religion, cultural history, history of art, drama, literature, and visual culture. It is not a survey course. Instead, the main task will be the sustained and critical study of a number of significant and representative works in order to present some major themes and art forms of the distinct and complex civilizations of China. In spite of inner tensions, this is a cultural tradition that can be seen as a highly integrated system composed of mutually reinforcing parts, making such an interdisciplinary and multimedia approach particularly effective. Toward the end of the term we will observe the system's collapse as it struggles to adapt to the modern world, and consider how our themes continue, persist, or change. We will conclude our course with discussions of art, poetry, and cinema from contemporary China. Background lectures on language and early culture will be followed by topics and readings that include: “Confucianism” (Confucius and Mencius); “Daoism” (Laozi and Zhuangzi); the art of argumentation; themes in Chinese religiosity; Chan (Zen) Buddhism; lyricism and visual experience in poetry and painting; music; traditional short fiction; literati and popular theater; modern fiction and culture; and film.

Course Requirements: occasional brief responses to readings, three short papers, and a final exam.

Intended Audience: There are no prerequisites for this course.

Class Format: The format of the course consists of three hours of lectures and one hour of discussion. The lectures will be given by:

- Baxter (language)
- Brown (early culture)
• Lam (music)
• Lin (“Daoism,” poetry, and garden)
• Tang (modern culture and literature)
• Nornes (film)
• Powers (painting)
• Brose (religion)
• Rolston (theater and traditional fiction)

This course is designed for you to learn Novice-High/Intermediate-Low-level Japanese language in an intensive, semi-immersion setting. It is "intense" because we will study a normally two-term amount of materials in one. It is "semi-immersion" in that in our classroom we constantly simulate authentic communicative interactions with speakers of Japanese, and will use the target language as much as possible while minimizing the use of English. Through extensive communication practice in classroom activities, we will work on developing all four skills (listening, speaking, reading, and writing, using hiragana, katakana and approximately 350 kanji) along with cultural understanding. Most course-related activities are collaborative in nature. You will learn to acquire a sentence/paragraph-level command in various topics around everyday life for college students and beyond. You are also required to attend minimum three hours of co-curricular activities, such as the Lunch Tables and Conversation Tables, per week. (Prerequisites: successful completion of RCLANG196/ASIANLAN129: Intensive Japanese I or its equivalent. In order to undertake ASIANLAN325: Third Year Japanese, you must pass the Placement Test at the Department of Asian Languages and Cultures).

Buddhism is comprised of a complex of traditions, spanning multiple cultures over the course of more than two millennia. Despite its dizzying diversity, there are a number of unifying themes—loosely woven networks of beliefs and practices found throughout Buddhist traditions across time and space. Such themes include the problem of suffering, the goal of liberation, the authority of the Buddha, and the centrality of texts, to name just a few. The topic of this course—the role of death in Buddhism—stands alongside and in relation to other central aspects of the Buddhist tradition. Why death? From a certain perspective, conceptions and practices of dying, death, and the afterlife are the fundamental concerns of all Buddhists. How does the immanence of death influence the actions of the living? How should one die? What happens at the moment of death? What should be done with the bodies of the dead? Is there an afterlife? What is it that is reborn? We will explore these and other issues as they manifest in distinct cultural contexts (India, Thailand, China, and Japan) and as cross-cultural phenomena. In addition to assigned readings of scholarly articles and translations of primary texts, relevant topics will be addressed in class through lectures, discussions, numerous images, and films. Everyone is welcome, no previous experience is required.

Course Requirements: In addition to attendance and participation, course requirements include weekly reading responses (1-2 paragraphs), one in-class presentation, one short (4-5 page) mid-term paper and one longer (8-9 page) paper. Attendance & Participation 20%; Reading Responses 20%; Mid-term paper 20%; Final paper 30%; Presentation 10%.

Intended Audience: Intended for undergraduates from multiple fields and concentrations including those with an interest in religion, Buddhism, Asian history, culture, and philosophy.

Class Format: The course will consist of lecture and discussion periods during the class. We will meet twice a week.

This course provides a broad introduction to the study of Christian conversion and its legacy in the regions now known as South, East, and Southeast Asia. Its focus is largely limited to the historical period during which Christian conversion was contemporaneous with other forms of global expansion such as colonialism. Drawing from a range of primary and secondary source materials, we examine who Christian missionaries were and the many motivations that drove them, the diversity of methods used to convert native populations, and, of tantamount importance, the ways in which local populations resisted and transformed Christianity to suit or blend with their own social and political structures, spiritual beliefs and practices, and notions of temporal and divine power.

Course Requirements: Four 600-word response papers. Multiple choice and short answers midterm (20%): Final take-home exam (30%). Choose three out of five provided questions about themes, processes, and controversies in the novel Silence, each answer 3-4 pages and a Works Cited page. Attendance and participation (10%): 3 or more unexcused absences automatically result in the loss of the entire participation grade.

Intended Audience: This course will appeal to a wide-range of undergraduate students, especially those interested in a concentration or minor in Asian Studies or History (it will satisfy a portion of the ALC "breadth" requirements). It also appeals to students interested in cross-cultural & interdisciplinary studies.

Class Format: Class meets twice a week primarily as lectures with some discussion and question/answer periods.
Students read secondary texts for the theoretical framework of week’s topic and then read primary source materials to give them a closer look at the details and mindsets of the people we are studying.

RELIGION 272    Introduction to the Study of Korean Religions
Section 001

Credits:     3
Requirements & Distribution:  HU
This course will serve as a broad survey of the major themes and developments in the history of religion in Korea. It begins with traces of religious life from the Neolithic period and ends with the rise of new religious movements in contemporary Korea. Rather than focus on dates, names, and facts, this course will pay closer attention to the ways in which we use such categories of analysis as magic, ritual, syncretism, gender, family, class, economy, colonialism, globalization, and the state to study Korean religions. Students will be asked to explore these and other topics by applying context-sensitive reading and critical analysis of the material. There are no prerequisites, but some background in the history and culture of Korea would be helpful. Readings will include both primary material in translation and secondary scholarship.

Course Requirements: 2 quizzes (map quiz, multiple choice, fill in the blanks), 2 response papers (1200-1500 words each (30%), reading journal (10%), participation (10%), and final exam (20%), like the quizzes but longer.

Intended Audience: Undergrads in all fields and especially those who intend to continue to take courses in Korean Studies or Asian Studies

Class Format: 3 hours per week consisting of two lectures and short in-class discussion

Primary Instructor: Lee, Sangjoon

This undergraduate course will explore the history of Korean cinema through the framework of national/transnational cinema discourse, auteur/genre theory, globalization, the division system, and the problem of nation/state which evokes the question of identity.

In this chronologically structured course, each student will learn the cinema of Korea through a set of key films, directors, and dominant genres by lectures, screenings, and intensive and engaging discussions throughout the semester. Such critically and historically important films as Madame Freedom, The Housemaid, JSA, Taegukki, My Sassy Girl, Oldboy, The Host, and Haeundae will be screened.

Through readings, discussions, in-class screenings, and presentations, our goal is to develop a broad understanding of Korean cinema and popular cultures exploring their wide-ranging impact and asking how they participate in the transnational production and circulation of culture, ideology, modernity, politics, and tradition in both regional and international contexts.

Intended Audience: It is not necessary for student to have prior knowledge of Korean cinema, and all are welcome.
This seminar is a broad introduction to the histories of Chinese and Japanese cinemas. It focuses on the historiographic trajectories of English language criticism and theory. Readings include books by Burch, Yoshimoto, Gerow, Zhang, Chow, and others. Films screened include fiction, documentary and avant-garde works in both languages.

Intended Audience: Knowledge of Japanese or Chinese is not necessary.

Southeast Asia ranks among the most highly diverse regions of the world. Situated between South Asia and East Asia, traversed by Chinese, Arab, and other maritime traders, colonized by five European colonial powers, mostly occupied by Japan during World War II, then caught up often violently in the conflicts of the cold war, Southeast Asia’s ethnic, cultural, religious, geographic, and political complexity draws scholars from wide-ranging fields. The eleven countries of contemporary Southeast Asia provide ample opportunity to study:

- ethnic and religious conflict;
- nationalism and the postcolonial nation-state;
- military rule, communist rebellions, secessionist movements, post-socialism, democratization, and religious revivalism including Islamist terrorism;
- rapid urbanization, globalization, and economic and technological change and their human and environmental costs and a variety of artistic, cultural, and political responses to them;
- human, women’s and children’s rights; and
- public health issues such as AIDS.

This course provides both a general introduction to Southeast Asia and an opportunity to introduce students to the multifaceted interests and current research of U-M faculty working in the region. After several introductory historical lectures by the coordinating instructor, the remainder of the course will consist of a series of guest lectures by U-M social science, humanities, and professional school faculty, graduate students, and visiting scholars on a range of topics such as those mentioned above. Presentations, readings and class assignments are designed to form a cohesive whole. The lectures will be interactive, with sufficient time for discussion and in-class projects.

WOMENSTD 151
Social Science Seminars on Women and Gender
Section 001
Women in Modern China
This seminar will introduce you to recent scholarship on women in China from the 19th century to the present. Having survived the Opium War and Sino-Japanese War in the 19th century, China entered the twentieth century with agitation to topple the imperial dynasty, experienced a communist revolution, and ended the century joining global capitalism. How did women live through wars, revolutions, and dramatic social, economic, political and cultural transformations? We will explore changes in diverse groups of women's lives in China's pursuit of modernity as well as analyze methods and frameworks used by authors in approaching their various subject matters. The course aims to enhance students' understanding of complicated historical processes in which women and representation of women have played a central role in transformations of gender construction, family, work, cultural production, social organization, and state formation. The course will end with an examination of Chinese feminist activism today. All readings are in English, which will be supplemented with a variety of visual materials shown in class. The seminar expects students to actively participate in discussions in class.

WOMENSTD 357 Feminist Practices in a Global Context

Section 001

Feminist activism has long been a global phenomenon. How do we understand feminist practices in various locations as well as the relationships between feminisms in the east and west, and the local and global? While racial relations, sexuality, and abortion rights are important issues for feminists in the U.S., what are the major issues concerning feminists in other countries? Without assuming a universal course of development of women’s activism, this course adopts a comparative approach to the investigation of particular historical processes of women’s movements in three countries: the United States, India, and China. Focusing on feminist activism in the three countries: this course attempts to ground our understanding of globalization in local history and to present in a concrete way that feminisms have histories and meanings that extend far beyond the North American continent. By comparison, we also hope to illuminate the cultural parameters of each location that have shaped various feminist practices. Personal narratives (in both textual and visual forms) of feminist activists from the three locations constitute the main body of texts for this course. Other readings and documentaries will provide historical backgrounds to these personal narratives. Students will be encouraged to participate actively in analyzing and comparing the textual and visual material in the process of learning diverse feminist issues crossing national boarders and from the personal to the political. This course presumes a willingness to engage in hard thinking, questioning, and respectful listening to the voices (spoken and written) of others.

Cross-Listed Classes: Amcult 363 – Asia Pacif Amer Women, Section 001

Primary Instructor: Lawsin, Emily P

This interdisciplinary course focuses on the experiences of Asian American and Pacific Islander American women in the United States, including, but not limited to Chinese, Japanese, Filipina, Korean, Native Hawaiian, South Asian, and Southeast Asian women. Texts and films include an introduction to materials by and about Asian/Pacific Islander American (APIA) women, from historical, anthropological, sociological, psychological, musical, and literary perspectives, thereby allowing students to compare and contrast the experiences of different ethnicities and generations. Discussions and assignments will examine the intersections of gender, race, ethnicity, class, sexuality, and nationality in APIA women’s lives. Learning critical theories about feminism, womanism, immigration, domestic violence, and globalization will show how APIA women have become agents of social change, publicly and privately, at home and in their communities.

Course Requirements: Assignments include: journals, two exams, and term project. For the term project, students will write a research essay OR produce a creative project on an APIA woman.
