Would you like a flexible, interdisciplinary major that allows you to develop your own individualized course of study tailored to your specific interests?

Do you want to integrate theoretical knowledge with practical skills so that you can actively and effectively engage in struggles for justice?

CONSIDER A MAJOR IN RC SOCIAL THEORY AND PRACTICE!

The Social Theory and Practice (STP) Major, open to all LSA students, supports you in developing analytical and practical skills necessary to engage ethically and effectively with communities domestic and abroad.

With support from faculty mentors, STP students develop an individualized, interdisciplinary major plan reflective of their own unique interests and passions. Draw from threads of sociology, psychology, criminal justice, economics, history, and many others.

Recent graduates have pursued such topics as:

- WORLD HEALTH POLICIES
- THE IMPACT OF GLOBALIZATION
- THE JUVENILE JUSTICE SYSTEM
- URBAN YOUTH EMPOWERMENT
- SUSTAINABLE AGRICULTURE
- COMMUNITY DIALOGUES

The STP major offers a solid preparation for careers in public policy, social work, grassroots organizations, non-profits, and the law.

Interested in learning more?
Contact STP Alum (‘10) and RC Lecturer, Becca Pickus, at rpickus@umich.edu
“I received a ‘Highest Honors’ rating for my original thesis research on community and youth engagement and its impact on community development and sustainability in rural settings (2013). I consider this a major career accomplishment as I feel it launched me into my career path and has significant ties to my current work in engaging young people and their surrounding community members in rural northern Michigan on a path toward success through access to post-secondary education options for all. As Prevention Coordinator with the Traverse Bay Children’s Advocacy Center, I helped develop and lead a community-driven movement to raise awareness about child sexual abuse in a six county region and engaged over 7,500 individuals in learning the facts, tools, and resources necessary to create safer communities for children. This spring I was asked to serve as the Keynote Speaker for the Manistee County Excellence in Education Awards.”