FRENCH Fall 2018 300-level French Courses

FRENCH 335: Composition and Stylistics: Advanced Composition
George Hoffmann  MWF 12-1 pm  #30310
Practicing advanced grammar through creative exercises in a variety of short formats that focus on one particular grammatical category or linguistic resource. You will self-publish a book of your writing at the end of the semester. Counts for ULWR.

FRENCH 337: Seminar in Translation
William Paulson  MW 1-2:30 pm  #30311
A practical course in techniques and problems of translation between French and English. The course is intended to develop students’ skills in writing and reading French as well as to help them to be better translators.

FRENCH 350.001: Special Topics in French and Francophone Studies: Making S Up
David Caron  TTh 2:30-4 pm  #27572
In this course, we’ll enjoy our love of fiction but also probe our ambiguous feelings toward the false. We will look at various modes of falsehood and invention, from lies and deceptions to vision and creativity, and ask ourselves to what extent taking liberties with the truth may liberate us.

FRENCH 350.002: Special Topics in French and Francophone Studies: Mapping the French Atlantic
Annette Joseph-Gabriel  TTh 11:30 am-1 pm  #30275
In this course, we will explore the importance and uses of maps in the French Atlantic. We will also use digital mapping methods to retrace the movements of enslaved people throughout the Atlantic as they navigated enslavement, freedom and citizenship in the 18th and 19th centuries.

FRENCH 380: Intermediate Business French
Juliette Moutinou  MWF 10-11 am  #30305
This course is offered to students with strong French skills and graduates. The goal is to equip students with tools to navigate France’s professional milieu. It is important to note that during the term, participants will interact with French students via Skype, once a week, and discuss workplace issues in France and the US. They will discuss French and American corporate cultures, French and American resumes, job interviews in France and the US, the 35-hour French work week vs. the 40-hour American week, vacation, leave, and lunch breaks in both countries, for instance.

FRENCH 381: Internship in France or Other Francophone Countries
Bethany Kreps  #22760
Earn 3 credits while completing a 4 week+ internship in a French speaking location between May and August! Connect and network with other UM Interns worldwide and blog about your experiences. Students will blog weekly while abroad and submit final projects in September - class does not meet regularly in the Fall.
