RESEARCH INTERESTS

My research interests center on adolescents' developing conceptions of gender and sexuality, and on the contribution of these notions to their sexual decision-making. I am particularly interested in how adolescents use the messages they receive about male-female relations from their parents, peers, and the media. My main line of research investigates the role of the media in the process of sexual socialization. Do media portrayals shape adolescents' attitudes and expectations about dating and sexual relationships, which in turn inform their sexual decision-making? What is the impact of exposure to sexually objectifying images of women? My work also explores the intersections between gender ideologies, body image, race, and sexuality.
